American Institutions

WILLIAM WILSON COOK, twice a graduate of the University of Michigan, A.B., 1880; LL.B., 1882, and until his death in 1930 a distinguished member of the New York bar, was exceedingly generous to his Alma Mater. He built the William W. Cook Law Quadrangle, dedicated to legal education and research. He gave the University the Martha Cook Building—a residence hall for women. Mr. Cook had many interests outside his profession but none was more intense than his devotion to American institutions. Indeed, so earnest was his belief in the value of those institutions that in 1927 he wrote and published a two-volume work entitled "American Institutions and Their Preservation." Motivated by the desire that his Alma Mater should make a major contribution to study, teaching, and dissemination of sound precepts concerning the American way of life, Mr. Cook established at the University the William W. Cook Foundation for lectures on American Institutions, handsomely endowed to achieve the ends he had in view.

THIS PROGRAM announces the eighth series of lectures to be held under the auspices of the Foundation. The lecturer is Walton Hale Hamilton, of Washington, D.C., one-time professor of law at Yale University School of Law, now engaged in active practice of law as a member of the firm of Arnold, Fortas & Porter, in Washington, D.C. Born in Hiwassee College, Tennessee, a son of a minister, Mr. Hamilton was educated first at Vanderbilt University and thereafter at the University of Texas, where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1907. Subsequently he enrolled as a graduate student at the University of Michigan, where he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1913. Thereafter, he embarked upon a long career of college teaching, commencing first as an instructor in medieval history at the University of Texas, but soon transferring his interest to economics. After he received his Doctor's degree at Michigan he accepted an appointment as an assistant professor in the economics department of this University. Subsequently he accepted invitations elsewhere, first at the University of Chicago, then Amherst College, and finally Yale University, where he became a member of the faculty of the School of Law, in 1928. Since 1945 he has been engaged in active practice. Always conscious of and interested in the public implications of the law, Mr. Hamilton has served as a member of the National Recovery Administration Board in Washington in 1934–35, as a delegate of the United States Government to the International Labor Office Conference in Geneva in 1935, and as a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States from 1938 to 1945. He is a member of the Georgia and Washington, D.C. bars. A prolific writer, he has produced both numerous articles in periodicals and an impressive list of volumes, including "Current Economic Problems," (1915), "Control of Wages," (1923), "The Case of Bituminous Coal," (1925), "A Way of Order for Bituminous Coal," (1928), "The Power to Govern," (1937), "Price and Price Policies," (1938), "The Pattern of Competition," (1940) "Antitrust in Government," (1940), "Patents and Free Enterprise," (1941). This eighth series of William W. Cook Lectures on American Institutions will be made available in published form as soon as possible after delivery.
