Part of the Law and Society Commons
THE SEVENTH ANNUAL SERIES OF THOMAS M. COOLEY LECTURES will be given by
F. H. LAWSOn, D.C.L.
of Gray's Inn, Barrister-at-Law,
Professor of Comparative Law, Oxford University, England

The subject for the series is:
A COMMON LAWYER LOOKS AT THE CIVIL LAW

The lectures will be given at 4:15 P.M.
November 16 to 20, Monday through Friday
Room 120, Hutchins Hall

Professor Lawson is one of the leading European experts on Comparative Law and is widely known on two continents.
He delivered the Hamlyn Lectures on "The Rational Strength of English Law" at the University of London in 1951.

No lawyer should feel that his education is complete until he knows something about the two great systems of law of the civilized world, namely, the Anglo-American system, and the Civil Law system. This series of lectures provides an opportunity for law students to learn something about the civil law. The lectures are open to all students of the University as well as to any other persons who may desire to attend.
