HUTCHINS HALL, ROOM 100 — ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN
THOMAS M. COOLEY was one of the leading figures in nineteenth-century American law and legal scholarship. He was a member of the first law faculty at the University of Michigan, which was assembled in 1859, and was appointed Dean of the Law Department in 1871. From 1864 to 1885 judicial service as a member of the Supreme Court of Michigan was added to his academic duties. Cooley is perhaps most frequently remembered today for his remarkably influential treatises, especially his works on Torts and Constitutional Limitations. In 1887 he was appointed first Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission by President Grover Cleveland.

The Thomas M. Cooley Lectureship was established by the faculty of The University of Michigan Law School in order to stimulate research and to communicate its results in the form of public lectures. The Lectureship is supported by the William W. Cook Endowment for Legal Research.

THE LECTURER

LOUIS LEVENTHAL JAFFE is among the most distinguished of a small band of legal scholars who, beginning with Felix Frankfurter in the 1920’s, carved out administrative law as a whole new field for systematic study and analysis. Mr. Jaffe’s work in administrative law has been both practical and theoretical. As a young lawyer during New Deal days he served with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the National Labor Relations Board. Later, in the Second World War, he was a public member of the War Labor Board. His thoughts on administrative law are set forth extensively in Judicial Control of Administrative Action (1965) and Cases and Materials on Administrative Law (1961, 1969).

Mr. Jaffe was born in Seattle in 1905. He attended Johns Hopkins and Harvard Law School, where he received an LL.B. in 1928 and an S.J.D. in 1932. Thereafter he clerked for Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court. From 1936 to 1950 he was on the faculty of Buffalo Law School, serving as Dean during his last two years there. Since 1950 Mr. Jaffe has been Byrne Professor of Administrative Law at Harvard.

Broadcasting has become one of Mr. Jaffe’s central concerns, and, more recently, so has ecology. The first of these interests led to his acting as a consultant to the Carnegie Commission on Educational Television.

Mr. Jaffe is a prolific writer, and, unlike many scholars of his caliber, he does not hesitate to bestow his largess on what some might regard as the less prestigious legal journals. It is legendary among his students that a month after his latest article has appeared, he may not remember just where it was published.

Mr. Jaffe has not confined his attention to administrative law. He has taught torts and criminal law, among other subjects, and he has roamed as far afield in his writing as Judicial Aspects of Foreign Relations (1938).
