University of Michigan Law School

University of Michigan Law School Scholarship Repository

Miscellaneous Law School Publications

Law School History and Publications

2004

University of Michigan Law School Faculty, 2004-2005

University of Michigan Law School

Follow this and additional works at: https://repository.law.umich.edu/miscellaneous

Part of the Legal Education Commons

Citation
https://repository.law.umich.edu/miscellaneous/123

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School History and Publications at University of Michigan Law School Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Miscellaneous Law School Publications by an authorized administrator of University of Michigan Law School Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact mlaw.repository@umich.edu.
The University of Michigan Law School

Faculty
2004-2005
"I arrived at the U of M Law School immediately after finishing a Ph.D. in history with the hope and expectation that law school would constitute another major step in my intellectual growth, not just professional or vocational training in law as a trade. My expectations were more than met by the crew of humanistic intellectuals — not just historians but accomplished scholars in philosophy, literature, political theory, anthropology, psychology, and other fields — that made up a large part of the Michigan faculty. In this atmosphere, the study of law was the best sort of professional training, the kind that equipped me both to enter the profession at a high level — for me, a Supreme Court clerkship — and to get the critical perspective and intellectual training that prepared me for the academic position that I had aimed at from the start."

Gerald F. Leonard, '95
Professor
Boston University School of Law
"I arrived at the U of M Law School immediately after finishing a Ph.D. in history with the hope and expectation that law school would constitute another major step in my intellectual growth, not just professional or vocational training in law as a trade. My expectations were more than met by the crew of humanistic intellectuals — not just historians but accomplished scholars in philosophy, literature, political theory, anthropology, psychology, and other fields — that made up a large part of the Michigan faculty. In this atmosphere, the study of law was the best sort of professional training, the kind that equipped me both to enter the profession at a high level — for me, a Supreme Court clerkship — and to get the critical perspective and intellectual training that prepared me for the academic position that I had aimed at from the start."

Gerald F. Leonard, '95
Professor
Boston University School of Law
"One of the most remarkable things about an education at Michigan Law is the nature and quality of faculty-student interaction. Not one, not two, but several of my professors made time to talk with me, about their courses and other issues, to encourage me, and to assist me with coursework as well as outside projects. I don't think that level of personalized attention is available at most law schools, and it made a critical difference in my law school experience."

Kristin A. Olbertson, M.A. '98/J.D. '00/Ph.D. candidate
University of Michigan

FACULTY

Layman E. Allen

Layman E. Allen has been a pioneer in the use of mathematical logic as a tool of analysis in law as well as in the use of computers in the field of legal research. He has developed a formal system of the logic of legal relations, which includes underlying systems of propositional, predicate, class, deontic, action, time, and capacitive logic. The primary application of the logic of legal relations and its accompanying legal relations language is in the drafting and interpretation of legal documents ranging from constitutions and statutes to contracts and bylaws. In the field of artificial intelligence and law the legal relations language has led to generative expert systems that facilitate analysis of legal provisions having multiple interpretations stemming from ambiguous expression of logical structure. His interest in teaching mathematical logic to lawyers has led to the development of a series of games about logic, mathematics, and law; the most notable being WFF 'N PROOF, EQUATIONS, and The Legal Argument Game of Legal Relations. Professor Allen is a graduate of Princeton with an A.B., Harvard with an M.P.A., and Yale with an LL.B. His research interests are mathematical logic, computers and law, instructional gaming, and artificial intelligence. He came to Michigan Law School from Yale in 1966.

The University of Michigan Law School is the national leader in the interdisciplinary study of the law. Many of our faculty hold appointments in other University departments. Their multidisciplinary approach to questions of human behavior and social policy offers our students the opportunity to pursue a deeper understanding of the law and legal institutions.

Reuven S. Avi-Yonah, the Irwin I. Cohn Professor of Law, specializes in international taxation and multinational enterprises, and is widely published in these subject areas. He also served as consultant to the U.S. Treasury on tax competition and to the Joint Committee on Taxation on international tax simplification. Professor Avi-Yonah earned his B.A., summa cum laude, from Hebrew University and then earned three degrees from Harvard: an A.M. in history, a Ph.D. in history and a J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School. Avi-Yonah has been a visiting professor of law at the University of Michigan, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania. He has also served as an assistant professor of law at Harvard and as an assistant professor of history at Boston College. In addition, he has practiced law with Milbank Tweed, Hadley & McCloy, New York; Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz, New York; and Ropes & Gray, Boston. His teaching interests focus on various aspects of taxation and multinational enterprises, and on the origins and development of the corporate form.
"One of the most remarkable things about an education at Michigan Law is the nature and quality of faculty-student interaction. Not one, not two, but several of my professors made time to talk with me, about their courses and other issues, to encourage me, and to assist me with coursework as well as outside projects. I don’t think that level of personalized attention is available at most law schools, and it made a critical difference in my law school experience."

Kristin A. Olbertson, M.A. ’98/J.D. ’00/Ph.D. candidate
University of Michigan

Layman E. Allen has been a pioneer in the use of mathematical logic as a tool of analysis in law as well as in the use of computers in the field of legal research. He has developed a formal system of the logic of legal relations, which includes underlying systems of propositional, predicate, class, deontic, action, time, and capacitive logic. The primary application of the logic of legal relations and its accompanying legal relations language is in the drafting and interpretation of legal documents ranging from constitutions and statutes to contracts and bylaws. In the field of artificial intelligence and law the legal relations language has led to generative expert systems that facilitate analysis of legal provisions having multiple interpretations stemming from ambiguous expression of logical structure. His interest in teaching mathematical logic to lawyers has led to the development of a series of games about logic, mathematics, and law; the most notable being WFF ‘N PROOF, EQUATIONS, and The Legal Argument Game of Legal Relations.

Professor Allen is a graduate of Princeton with an A.B., Harvard with an M.P.A., and Yale with an LL.B. His research interests are mathematical logic, computers and law, instructional gaming, and artificial intelligence. He came to Michigan Law School from Yale in 1966.

The University of Michigan Law School is the national leader in the interdisciplinary study of the law. Many of our faculty hold appointments in other University departments. Their multidisciplinary approach to questions of human behavior and social policy offers our students the opportunity to pursue a deeper understanding of the law and legal institutions.

Reuven S. Avi-Yonah, the Irwin I. Cohen Professor of Law, specializes in international taxation and multinational enterprises, and is widely published in these subject areas. He also served as consultant to the U.S. Treasury on tax competition and to the Joint Committee on Taxation on international tax simplification. Professor Avi-Yonah earned his B.A., summa cum laude, from Hebrew University and then earned three degrees from Harvard: an A.M. in history and a J.D., magna cum laude; from Harvard Law School. Avi-Yonah has been a visiting professor of law at the University of Michigan, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania. He has also served as an assistant professor of law at Harvard and as an assistant professor of history at Boston College. In addition, he has practiced law with Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy, New York; Wachtell, Lipon, Rosen & Katz, New York; and Ropes & Gray, Boston. His teaching interests focus on various aspects of taxation and multinational enterprises, and on the origins and development of the corporate form.

Reuven S. Avi-Yonah
Michael S. Barr

Michael S. Barr, who joined the faculty as an assistant professor in fall 2001, teaches Financial Institutions, Jurisdiction and Choice of Law, and Transnational Law. His research focuses on access to capital and financial services. Barr serves as chair of the Section on Financial Institutions of the Association of American Law Schools, and was co-organizer of the Law School's Conference on Globalization.

"I have been prepared for my work as a writer, lawyer, advocate, and teacher, because of my time at what is one of the finest law schools in the country. I learned how to ask the hard questions, and I learned how to start answering them — this is a process that continues without end, but it was in Ann Arbor that it had its start. I have been able to write two books about diversity and civil rights, based on my training at Michigan. I owe a debt of gratitude to the institution and especially its faculty."

Frank Wu, '91
Dean, Wayne State University Law School

Laura Beny

Assistant Professor Laura Beny joined the University of Michigan Law School in 2003. Beny earned her M.A. and Ph.D. in economics at Harvard University, her J.D. at Harvard Law School and her B.A. in economics at Stanford University. At Harvard Law School and for Judge Pierre N. Leval, then of the Southern District of New York, he served in senior positions in the U.S. government from 1994 to 2001 special advisor and counsel on the Policy Planning Staff of the State Department; Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin's special assistant; deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury for community development policy; and special adviser to the President. Barr has been a visiting fellow at the Max Planck Institute, where he remains a nonresident senior fellow.

"Michigan's opportunities for interdisciplinary study are unparalleled. In my short time here, I have taken courses in business, economics, and natural resource management. My Law School professors regularly draw on these disciplines to communicate the significance of a legal opinion — a practice that has made my interdisciplinary education at Michigan holistic and interconnected."

Stephen Higgins, J.D./M.S. Candidate
University of Michigan

Omri Ben-Shahar

Omri Ben-Shahar is the founder and director of the John M. Olin Center for Law and Economics. Before joining the Law School faculty fulltime, he taught as an assistant professor of law and economics at Tel-Aviv University, was a research fellow at the Israel Democracy Institute, and clerked at the Supreme Court of Israel. Ben-Shahar teaches courses in Contracts and Economic Analysis of Law, and coordinates the Law and Economics Workshop. Ben-Shahar holds a B.A. in economics and L.B. from Hebrew University and an L.L.M., S.J.D., and Ph.D. in economics from Harvard. Ben-Shahar writes in the field of contract law. His work has been published in many journals, among them the Yale Law Journal, Michigan Law Review, Journal of Legal Studies, and the American Law and Economics Review. His article "Contracts without Consent," was the subject matter of a recent symposium published by the University of Pennsylvania Law Review.

"Susanna Blumenthal researches and teaches in the areas of American legal history, criminal law, trusts and estates, and torts. Assistant Professor Blumenthal is currently working on a book that traces changing conceptions of human agency and responsibility through the history of American law. Professor Blumenthal received her A.B., magna cum laude, from Harvard-Radcliffe College, after which she spent a year on fellowship at Oxford. She earned her J.D. from Yale Law School, where she was a Coker Teaching Fellow and editor of the Yale Law Journal. In addition, she was awarded a Ph.D. in history by Yale University and her dissertation, "Law and the Modern Mind: The Problem of Consciousness in American Legal Culture, 1800-1930," received the George Washington Egbert Prize. Blumenthal has also published articles in the Chicago-Kent Law Review and the Journal of the history of the Behavioral Sciences. Before joining the Michigan fac-

Susanna L. Blumenthal

SUSANNA BLUMENTHAL

Blumenthal

Blumenthal

Susanna L. Blumenthal
Michael S. Barr

Barr joined the faculty as an assistant professor in fall 2001, teaches Financial Institutions, Jurisdiction and Choice of Law, and Transnational Law. His research focuses on access to capital and financial services. Barr serves as chair of the Section on Financial Institutions of the Association of American Law Schools, and was co-organizer of the Law School's Conference on Globalization. Law & Development. Barr earned his B.A. summa cum laude, from Yale University as a M. Phil. in International Relations from Magdalen College, Oxford, as a Rhodes Scholar; and his J.D. from Yale Law School. Barr clerked for Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States, and for Judge Pierre N. Leval, then of the Southern District of New York. He served in senior positions in the U.S. government from 1994 to 2001: special adviser and counselor on the Policy Planning Staff of the State Department; Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin's special assistant; deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury for community development policy; and special adviser to the President. Barr has been a visiting fellow at the Brookings Institution, where he remains a nonresident senior fellow.

I have been prepared for my work as a writer, lawyer, advocate, and teacher, because of my time at what is one of the finest law schools in the country. I learned how to ask the hard questions, and I learned how to start answering them — this is a process that continues without end, but it was in Ann Arbor that it had its start. I have been able to write two books about diversity and civil rights, based on my training at Michigan. I owe a debt of gratitude to the institution and especially its faculty.

Frank Wu, '91
Dean, Wayne State University Law School

Michael S. Barr

Laura Beny

Assistant Professor Laura Beny joined the University of Michigan Law School in 2003. Beny earned her M.A. and Ph.D. in economics at Harvard University, her J.D. at Harvard Law School and her B.A. in economics at Stanford University. At Harvard Law School and at a John M. Olin Fellow in Law and Economics from 1997 to 2001. Her research interests include a broad range of topics at the intersection of law and economics, finance, economic institutions, and development. Her recent activities include presentation of a workshop on social responsibility of multinational corporations at the American Comparative Literature Association Annual Meeting, Global and Ethnic Networks Old and New, University of Michigan, April 2004, and presentation of her article "Do Shareholders Value Insider Trading?" at the annual meeting of the American Law and Economics Association.

"Michigan's opportunities for interdisciplinary study are unparalleled. In my short time here, I have taken courses in business, economics, and natural resource management. My Law School professors regularly draw on these disciplines to communicate the significance of a legal opinion — a practice that has made my interdisciplinary education at Michigan holistic and interconnected."

Stephen Higgins, J.D./M.S. Candidate University of Michigan

Susanna Blumenthal

Susanna Blumenthal researches and teaches in the areas of American legal history and criminal law, trusts and estates, and torts. Assistant Professor Blumenthal is currently working on a book that traces changing conceptions of human agency and responsibility through the history of American law. Professor Blumenthal received her A.B., magna cum laude, from Harvard-Radcliffe College, after which she spent a year on fellowship at Oxford. She earned her J.D. from Yale Law School, where she was a Coker Teaching Fellow and editor of the Yale Law Journal. In addition, she was awarded a Ph.D. in history by Yale University and her dissertation, "Law and the Modern Mind: The Problem of Consciousness in American Legal Culture, 1800-1930," received the George Washington Eggleston Prize. Blumenthal has also published articles in the Chicago-Kent Law Review and the Journal of the History of the Behavioral Sciences. Before joining the Michigan faculty, she served as a law clerk to Judge Kimba M. Wood in the Southern District of New York, and was a Samuel I. Golbuckle Fellow in Legal History at New York University School of Law. She spent the 2003-2004 academic year as a Radcliffe Institute Fellow at Harvard University. She was awarded a fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies for 2003-2004.

Omri Ben-Shahar

Omri Ben-Shahar is the founder and director of the John M. Olin Center for Law and Economics. Before joining the Law School faculty fulltime, he taught as an assistant professor of law and economics at Tel-Aviv University, was a research fellow at the Israel Democracy Institute, and clerked at the Supreme Court of Israel. Ben-Shahar teaches courses in Contracts and Economic Analysis of Law, and coordinates the Law and Economics Workshop. Ben-Shahar holds a B.A. in economics and L.B. from Hebrew University and an LL.M. S.J.D., and Ph.D. in economics from Harvard. Ben-Shahar writes in the field of contract law. His work has been published in many journals, among them the Yale Law Journal of the Behavioral Sciences, the Journal of Legal Studies, and the American Law and Economics Review. His article "Contracts Without Consent," was the subject matter of a recent symposium published by the University of Pennsylvania Law Review.

Ben-Shahar was awarded a fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies for 2003-2004.

Ben-Shahar
Evan H. Caminker

I decided to come to Michigan because of the faculty's interdisciplinary focus and am happy I did so. In classes, students are encouraged to discuss different approaches to individual legal problems and wider societal issues. Using the tools of other disciplines to analyze legal issues allows me to take a more multifaceted approach — looking at the same issue from several perspectives. I feel that I learned a great deal at Michigan because of this.

Katherine Y. Barnes, '00
Associate Professor of Law
Washington University School of Law

Edward H. Cooper

I came to Michigan because I wasn’t just interested in the law, but in the way the law contributes to and affects real life. I am able to take away from my courses not only an understanding of the law, but of the many disciplines that interact with it. My professors appreciate the interdisciplinary nature of the law and the classroom is a better place because of it.

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Sherman J. Clark

I have written about institutions and practices ranging from direct democracy to the jury to criminal procedure. Another line of Clark’s research focuses on the nature and normative status of persuasive legal argument. In addition to his teaching and research interests, Clark served as an adviser to Wayne County, Michigan, and the City of Detroit in their efforts to hold gun manufacturers liable for allegedly negligent distribution practices. The legal theory he advanced, known as the “willful blindness” theory, focused on the manufacturers’ alleged knowing exploitation of a thriving secondary market in the indirect sale of firearms to felons and minors.

Steven P. Croley

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs, teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a Ph.D. in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen G. Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA.

Edward H. Cooper joined the Law School faculty in 1972 and was named the Thomas M. Cooley Professor of Law in 1988. He is the coauthor with the late C.A. Wright and A.L. Miller of the original, second, and third editions of Federal Procedure: Jurisdiction, Precedent, and Procedure, a leading multivolume treatise on federal jurisdiction and procedure, and his articles have contributed to legal scholarship for more than 30 years. From 1991–1992, Cooper served as a member of the Civil Rules Advisory Committee for the Judicial Conference of the United States. He has served as reporter for the committee since 1992. In addition, he has been a member of the Council of the American Law Institute since 1988 and has served as an adviser on several of its projects. Cooper graduated from Dartmouth College with an A.B. and earned his LL.B. at Harvard Law School. He served as a law clerk to the Hon. Clifford O’ Sullivan, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and then practiced in Detroit. Professor Cooper was an associate professor at the University of Minnesota Law School for five years before joining the Law School faculty.

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Steven P. Croley

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs, teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a Ph.D. in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen G. Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also practices on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.

Sherman J. Clark

Sherman J. Clark is a graduate of Towson State University and the Harvard Law School. He practiced in Washington, D.C., with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis. Professor Clark, who joined the faculty in 1995, teaches courses in torts, evidence, and sports law. His current research examines the ways in which certain legal rules and institutions can serve as both for the construction and articulation of community meaning and identity in this vein, he has written about institutions and practices ranging from direct democracy to the jury to criminal procedure. Another line of Clark’s research focuses on the nature and normative status of persuasive legal argument. In addition to his teaching and research interests, Clark served as an adviser to Wayne County, Michigan, and the City of Detroit in their efforts to hold gun manufacturers liable for allegedly negligent distribution practices.

Steven P. Croley

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs, teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a Ph.D. in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen G. Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also practices on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.
Evan H. Caminker

Edward H. Cooper

I decided to come to Michigan because of the faculty’s interdisciplinary focus and am happy I did so. In classes, students are encouraged to discuss different approaches to individual legal problems and wider societal issues. Using the tools of other disciplines to analyze legal issues allows me to take a more multifaceted approach — looking at the same issue from several perspectives. I feel that I learned a great deal at Michigan because of this.

Katherine Y. Barnes, ’00
Associate Professor of Law
Washington University School of Law

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a PhD in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also litigates on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.

Edward H. Cooper joined the Law School faculty in 1972 and was named the Thomas M. Cooley Professor of Law in 1988. He is the coauthor with the late C.A. Wright and A.F. Miller of the original, second, and new third editions of Federal Procedure & Practice: Jurisdiction, a leading multivolume treatise on federal jurisdiction and procedure, and his articles have contributed to legal scholarship for more than 30 years. From 1991—1992, Cooper served as a member of the Civil Rules Advisory Committee for the Judicial Conference of the United States. He has served as reporter for the committee since 1992. In addition, he has been a member of the Council of the American Law Institute since 1988 and has served as adviser on several of its projects. Cooper graduated from Dartmouth College with an A.B. and earned his LL.B. at Harvard Law School. He served as a law clerk to the Hon. Clifford O’ Sullivan, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and then practiced in Detroit. Professor Cooper was an associate professor at the University of Minnesota Law School for five years before joining the Law School faculty.

“I came to Michigan because I wasn’t just interested in the law, but in the way the law contributes to and affects real life. I am able to take away from my courses not only an understanding of the law, but of the many disciplines that interact with it. My professors appreciate the interdisciplinary nature of the law and the classroom is a better place because of it.”

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Steven P. Croley

Sherman J. Clark

Edward H. Cooper

“... I am able to take away from my courses not only an understanding of the law, but of the many disciplines that interact with it. My professors appreciate the interdisciplinary nature of the law and the classroom is a better place because of it.”

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a PhD in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also litigates on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.

“I came to Michigan because I wasn’t just interested in the law, but in the way the law contributes to and affects real life. I am able to take away from my courses not only an understanding of the law, but of the many disciplines that interact with it. My professors appreciate the interdisciplinary nature of the law and the classroom is a better place because of it.”

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a PhD in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also litigates on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.

I decided to come to Michigan because of the faculty’s interdisciplinary focus and am happy I did so. In classes, students are encouraged to discuss different approaches to individual legal problems and wider societal issues. Using the tools of other disciplines to analyze legal issues allows me to take a more multifaceted approach — looking at the same issue from several perspectives. I feel that I learned a great deal at Michigan because of this.

Katherine Y. Barnes, ’00
Associate Professor of Law
Washington University School of Law

Sherman J. Clark is a graduate of Towson State University and the Harvard Law School. He practiced in Washington, D.C., with the law firm of Kirkland & Ellis. Professor Clark, who joined the faculty in 1995, teaches courses in torts, evidence, and sports law. His current research examines the ways in which certain legal rules and institutions can serve as fora for the construction and articulation of community meaning and identity in this vein, he has written about institutions and practices ranging from direct democracy to the jury to criminal procedure. Another line of Clark’s research focuses on the nature and normative status of persuasive legal argument. In addition to his teaching and research interests, Clark served as an adviser to lawyers for Wayne County, Michigan, and the City of Detroit in their efforts to hold gun manufacturers liable for allegedly negligent distribution practices. The legal theory he articulated, known as the “willfulness” theory, is based on the manufacturers’ alleged knowing exploitation of a thriving secondary market in the indirect sale of firearms to felons and felons.

Edward H. Cooper joined the Law School faculty in 1972 and was named the Thomas M. Cooley Professor of Law in 1988. He is the coauthor with the late C.A. Wright and A.F. Miller of the original, second, and new third editions of Federal Procedure & Practice: Jurisdiction, a leading multivolume treatise on federal jurisdiction and procedure, and his articles have contributed to legal scholarship for more than 30 years. From 1991—1992, Cooper served as a member of the Civil Rules Advisory Committee for the Judicial Conference of the United States. He has served as reporter for the committee since 1992. In addition, he has been a member of the Council of the American Law Institute since 1988 and has served as adviser on several of its projects. Cooper graduated from Dartmouth College with an A.B. and earned his LL.B. at Harvard Law School. He served as a law clerk to the Hon. Clifford O’Sullivan, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and then practiced in Detroit. Professor Cooper was an associate professor at the University of Minnesota Law School for five years before joining the Law School faculty.

“I came to Michigan because I wasn’t just interested in the law, but in the way the law contributes to and affects real life. I am able to take away from my courses not only an understanding of the law, but of the many disciplines that interact with it. My professors appreciate the interdisciplinary nature of the law and the classroom is a better place because of it.”

Jenelle Beavers, J.D./M.P.H. Candidate
University of Michigan

Steven P. Croley, professor of law and associate dean for academic affairs teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts and related subjects. Professor Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar and won the William Jennings Bryan Prize. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor for the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olm student fellow, and won a John M. Olm Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a PhD in Politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and Michigan Bars, and is an active member of the Administrative Law & Regulatory Practice Section of the ABA. Professor Croley began his teaching career at the Law School in 1993. He has served as a consultant to the Administrative Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Michigan Law Revision Commission. He also litigates on behalf of individual clients. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review.
Donald N. Duquette

Duquette's book, Advocating for the Child in Protection Proceedings, formed the conceptual framework for the first national evaluation of child representation as mandated by the U.S. Congress (National Study of Guardians ad Litem Effectiveness, by CSR Inc). As a clinical professor of law and the director of the Law School's Child Advocacy Law Clinic, Duquette has developed one of the most respected and influential child advocacy law programs in the country. He is a graduate of Michigan State University and was a social worker specializing in child protection and foster care prior to earning his J.D. at U-M. Before joining the clinical law faculty in 1976, he served as an assistant professor of pediatrics and human development at Michigan State University. His research and teaching interests are clinical law and interdisciplinary approaches to child welfare law and policy. During a leave from the Law School, he managed an expert work group for the U.S. Children's Bureau and drafted Permanency for Children: Guidelines for Public Policy and State Legislation as part of President Clinton's Adoption Initiative. He is co-director of a national project to certify lawyers as specialists in child welfare law and policy. In 1995, Duquette started the Law School's first mediation clinic.

Rebecca S. Eisenberg

Eisenberg has written and lectured extensively about biotechnology patent law and the role of intellectual property in research science and has played an active role in policy debates concerning intellectual property in biomedical research. Professor Eisenberg teaches courses on patent law, trademark law, and FDA law and has taught courses on torts, legal regulation of science, and legal issues in biomedical research. She has received grants from the U.S. Department of Energy for her work on patents in the Human Genome Project. She currently serves on the Panel on Science, Technology and Law of the National Academies of Science and the Board of Directors of the Stem Cell Genomics and Therapeutics Network in Canada. Eisenberg is a graduate of Stanford University and Boalt Hall School of Law (University of California, Berkeley), where she was editor-in-chief of the California Law Review. Following law school she clerked for Chief Judge Robert F. Peckham on the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California. She joined the Michigan Law School faculty in 1984. Professor Eisenberg is the Robert and Barbara Luciano Professor of Law.

Phoebe Ellsworth

Phoebe Ellsworth is the Frank Murphy Distinguished University Professor of Law and Psychology and has pioneered work in the field of psychology and law. Professor Ellsworth has published widely on the subjects of person perception and emotion, public opinion and the death penalty, and jury behavior. Her recent articles have appeared in The Handbook of Affective Sciences, Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin, and Psychology, Public Policy, and Law. She is a graduate of Harvard and Stanford Universities. Ellsworth also has a joint appointment in the Psychology Department at the University of Michigan. She is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a Phi Beta Kappa Distinguished Lecturer (2002-04). In 2001, Ellsworth was honored by Mount Saint Mary's College with the creation of the annual Phoebe Ellsworth Psychology and Justice Symposium in recognition of her contributions to the areas of law and psychology.

The University of Michigan Law School is a leader in the study of international law and institutions. It was the first American law school to offer a course on European Community law and to establish the subject as a field of study in the United States, and the first law school to require completion of Transnational Law as a condition for graduation.

Alicia Davis Evans teaches in the corporate law area. Her current research focuses on how the law should respond to increased business complexity. Evans earned her B.S. in business administration, summa cum laude, from Florida A&M University, her MBA from Harvard Business School, and her J.D. from Yale Law School. While at Yale, Evans was co-notes editor of the Yale Journal of Regulation, a senior student director of the Housing and Community Development Clinic, and a co-recipient of the Stephen J. Masey Prize and Yale Elm and Ivy Award. Her experience includes practicing law with Kirkland & Ellis LLP in Washington, D.C., where she represented public and private companies and private equity firms in mergers and acquisitions and leveraged buyouts, and investment banking—first with Goldman Sachs & Co. in New York, and then with Raymond James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Florida, where she most recently served as a vice president and represented public and private companies in middle market mergers and acquisitions transactions. She is a member of the bars of Florida and the District of Columbia. Evans joined the Law School faculty in fall 2004 as an assistant professor.

Alicia Davis Evans
Donald N. Duquette

Donald N. Duquette's book, Advocating for the Child in Protection Proceedings, formed the conceptual framework for the first national evaluation of child representation as mandated by the U.S. Congress (National Study of Guardians of Litem Effectiveness, by CSR Inc.). As a clinical professor of law and the director of the Law School's Child Advocacy Law Clinic, Duquette has developed one of the most respected and influential child advocacy law programs in the country. He is a graduate of Michigan State University and was a social worker specializing in child protection and foster care prior to earning his J.D. at U-M. Before joining the clinical law faculty in 1976, he served as an assistant professor of pediatrics and human development at Michigan State University. His research and teaching interests are clinical law and interdisciplinary approaches to child welfare law and policy. During a leave from the Law School, he managed an expert work group for the U.S. Children's Bureau and drafted Permanency for Children Guidelines for Public Policy and State Legislation as part of President Clinton's Adoption Initiative on Adoption and Foster Care. He is co-director of a national project to certify lawyers as specialists in child welfare law and policy. During his leave, he also served on the U.S. Children's Bureau and the U.S. Congress

Rebecca S. Eisenberg

Rebecca S. Eisenberg has written and lectured extensively about biotechnology, patent law, and the role of intellectual property in research science and has played an active role in policy debates concerning intellectual property in biomedical research. Professor Eisenberg teaches courses on patent law, trademark law, and FDA law and has taught courses on torts, legal regulation of science, and legal issues in biomedical research. She has received grants from the U.S. Department of Energy for her work on patents in the Human Genome Project. She currently serves on the Panel on Science, Technology and Law of the National Academies of Science and the Board of Directors of the Stem Cell Genomics and Therapeutics Network in Canada. Eisenberg is a graduate of Stanford University and Boalt Hall School of Law (University of California, Berkeley), where she was articles editor of the California Law Review. Following law school, she clerked for Chief Judge Robert F. Peckham on the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California. She joined the Michigan Law School faculty in 1984. Professor Eisenberg is the Robert and Barbara Luciano Professor of Law at the University of Michigan. Her research and teaching interests include intellectual property in biomedical research. She has published widely on the subjects of person perception and emotion, public opinion and the death penalty, and jury behavior. Her recent articles have appeared in The Handbook of Affective Sciences, Personality and Social Psychology and Psychology, Public Policy, and Law. Eisenberg is the Robert and Barbara Luciano Professor of Law and Psychology at the Law School. Her current research focuses on how the law should respond to increased business complexity. Evans earned her B.S. in business administration, summa cum laude, from Florida A&M University, her MBA from Harvard Business School, and her J.D. from Yale Law School. While at Yale, she was co-notes editor of the Yale Journal of Regulation, a senior student director of the Housing and Community Development Clinic, and a co-recipient of the Stephen J. Masey Prize and Yale Elm and Ivy Award. Her experience includes practicing law with Kirkland & Ellis LLP in Washington, D.C., where she represented public and private companies and private equity firms in mergers and acquisitions and leveraged buyouts, and investment banking — first with Goldman Sachs & Co. in New York, and then with Raymond James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Florida, where she most recently served as a vice president and represented public and private companies in middle market mergers and acquisitions transactions. She is a member of the bars of Florida and the District of Columbia. Evans joined the Law School faculty in fall 2004 as an assistant professor.
American judges are becoming more aware of their responsibilities to respect not only domestic law but also the law of nations. But more effort is needed. Law schools must ensure that their students are well versed in the law of nations. But more effort is needed. Law schools must ensure that their students are well versed in

Richard D. Friedman

Richard D. Friedman, the Ralph W. Aigler Professor of Law, is an expert on evidence and Supreme Court history. He is the general editor of The New Wigmore, a multi-volume treatise on evidence, and has been designated to write the volume on the Appeals Court in the Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise History of the United States Supreme Court. In addition, he has published an evidence textbook, The Elements of Evidence, and many law review articles and essays. His recent publications have appeared in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, University of Virginia Law Review, Law and Contemporary Problems, Cornell Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and Journal of Supreme Court History, among other journals. Professor Friedman earned a B.A. and a J.D. from Harvard, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review, and a D.Phil. in modern history from Oxford University. He clerked for Judge Irving R. Kaufman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and was then an associate for the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in New York City. He joined the Law School faculty in 1988 from Cardozo Law School.

Philip M. Frost

Philip M. Frost joined the Law School faculty in 1996 as a clinical assistant professor and he now serves as associate director of the Law School's Legal Practice Program. Frost practiced with the Detroit-based law firm of Dickerson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman, now DickinsonWright PLLC, from 1974 through 1996, in the area of commercial litigation, antitrust, and bankruptcy. He was a partner with the firm from 1981 to 1996 and chaired its pro bono committees. Frost received his B.A. in history from Yale University and then earned his J.D., magna cum laude and Order of the Coif, at the U-M Law School. Following Law School, he served as a law clerk to the Hon. Philip Pratt of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan. In addition to his Law School activities, Frost has served as a commercial panel arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association, has presented before the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts & Letters, and has served as an editor of Legal Writing, The Journal of the Legal Writing Institute.

Bruce W. Frier

Bruce W. Frier, the Henry King Ransom Professor of Law, is the author of numerous books and articles on economic and social history, focusing especially on Roman law. His publications include Lordships and Tenants in Imperial Rome, The Rise of the Roman Jurists, A Casebook on the Roman Law of Debt, and A Casebook on Roman Family Law. In addition to his Law School professorship, in 2001–2002, he served as the interim chair for the Department of Classical Studies at U-M and holds a joint appointment in that department. Professor Frier received a B.A. from Trinity College and a Ph.D. in classics from Princeton University. He was a fellow of the American Academy in Rome and taught at Bryn Mawr College before joining the Department of Classical Studies at the University of Michigan in 1969. He has taught at the Law School since 1981.

Thomas A. Green

Thomas A. Green, the John P. Dawson Collegiate Professor of Law and Professor of History, teaches English and American legal history both to law students and to students of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts. His primary research interest is the history of criminal law. Within that field he emphasizes the cultural foundations of law and legal institutions, especially considering the social and intellectual history of the criminal trial jury and ideas regarding criminal responsibility. Professor Green is the author of Verdict According to Conscience: Perspectives on the English Criminal Trial Jury, 1200–1800, and editor of Studies in Legal History, sponsored by the American Society for Legal History. Green is also the co-editor of On the Laws and Customs of England: Essays in Honor of Samuel E. Thorne, and Twelve Good Men and True: The Criminal Trial Jury, 1200–1800. He is currently working on the history of the American criminal trial jury and criminal responsibility. Professor Green is a graduate of Columbia University. He received a Ph.D. in history from Harvard University and a J.D. from Harvard Law School. Prior to joining the University faculty, he taught medieval and English history at Bard College.
Richard D. Friedman

Richard D. Friedman, the Ralph W. Agger Professor of Law, is an expert on evidence and Supreme Court History. He is the general editor of The New Wigmore, a multi-volume treatise on evidence, and has been designated to write the volume on the Hughes Court in the Olver Wendell Holmes Devise History of the United States Supreme Court. In addition, he has published an evidence textbook, The Elements of Evidence, and many law review articles and essays. His recent publications have appeared in The University of Pennsylvania Law Review, University of Virginia Law Review, Law and Contemporary Problems, Cornell Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and Journal of Supreme Court History, among other journals. Professor Friedman earned a B.A. and a J.D. from Harvard, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review, and a D.Phil. in modern history from Oxford University. He clerked for Judge Irving R. Kaufman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and was then an associate for the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in New York City. He joined the Law School faculty in 1986 from Cardozo Law School.

Philip M. Frost

Philip M. Frost joined the Law School faculty in 1996 as a clinical assistant professor and he now serves as associate director of the Law School’s Legal Practice Program. Frost practiced with the Detroit-based law firm of Dickenson, Wright, Moon, Van Duren & Freeman, now Dickenson, Wright PLLC. Frost is a graduate of the U-M, earned a B.A. and a J.D. from Harvard, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review, and a magna cum laude from Cardozo Law School.

Bruce W. Frier

Bruce W. Frier, the Henry King Ransom Professor of Law, is the author of numerous books and articles on economic and social history, focusing especially on Roman law. His publications include Lombards and Franks in Imperial Rome: The Rise of the Roman Jurists, A Casebook on the Roman Law of Debt, and A Casebook on Roman Family Law. In addition to his Law School professorship, in 2001–2002 he served as the interim chair for the Department of Classical Studies at U-M and holds a joint appointment in that department. Professor Frier received a B.A. from Trinity College and a Ph.D. in classics from Princeton University. He was a fellow of the American Academy in Rome and taught at Bryn Mawr College before joining the Department of Classical Studies at the University of Michigan in 1969. He has taught at the Law School since 1981.

Thomas A. Green

Thomas A. Green, the John P. Dawson Collegiate Professor of Law and Professor of History, teaches English and American legal history both to law students and to students of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts. His primary research interest is the history of criminal law. Within that field he emphasizes the cultural foundations of law and legal institutions, especially considering the social and intellectual history of the criminal trial jury and ideas regarding criminal responsibility. Professor Green is the author of Verdict: According to Conscience. Perspectives on the English Criminal Trial Jury, 1200–1800, and editor of Studies in Legal History, sponsored by the American Society for Legal History. Green is also the co-editor of On the Laws and Customs of England Essays in Honor of Samuel E. Thorne, and Twelve Good Men and True: The Criminal Trial Jury, 1200–1800. He is currently working on the history of the American criminal trial jury and criminal responsibility. Professor Green is a graduate of Columbia University. He received a Ph.D. in history from Harvard University and a J.D. from Harvard Law School. Prior to joining the University faculty, he taught medieval and English history at Bard College.
Samuel R. Gross

Samuel R. Gross, the Thomas and Mable Long Professor of Law, teaches evidence, criminal procedure, and courses on the use of the social sciences in law. His published work has focused on the death penalty, false confessions, racial profiling, eyewitness identification, the use of expert witnesses, and the relationship between pretrial bargaining and trial verdicts. He graduated from Columbia College in 1968 and earned a J.D. from the University of California at Berkeley in 1973. Professor Gross worked as a criminal defense attorney in San Francisco for several years, and as an attorney with the United Farm Workers Union in California and the Wounded Knee Legal Defense Committee in Nebraska and South Dakota. As a cooperating attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc. in New York and the National Jury Project in Oakland, California, he litigated a series of test cases on jury selection in capital trials and worked on the issue of racial discrimination in the use of the death penalty. He has been a visiting lecturer at Yale Law School, a visiting professor at Columbia Law School, and taught for several years at the Stanford Law School.

“The Law School’s internship program allowed me to witness the International Law Commission’s work and to participate through research and writing on the issues under discussion. Michigan students are fortunate to have an ILC member as a regular visiting professor. He is both a leader in his field and genuinely committed to helping students.”

Sean C. Grimsley, ’00
Former Judicial Clerk to Justice Sandra Day O’Connor, United States Supreme Court October Term 2003
Current Associate, Bartlit Beck Herman Palenchar & Scott LLP
Denver, Colorado

David M. Hasen

David M. Hasen joined the University of Michigan Law School faculty as an assistant professor in fall 2003. Professor Hasen’s areas of research and teaching include taxation, jurisprudence, and administrative law. He received a B.A. in history from Reed College, a Ph.D. in government from Harvard University, and a J.D. from Yale Law School, where he served as a notes editor for the Yale Law Journal. Hasen clerked for Judge Marke Chester in the Northern District of California and has worked as an associate in the tax departments of Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP and Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, where his practice focused on corporate taxation and the taxation of financial products. His current research projects include a paper dealing with the application of established tax principles to modern financial products; an analysis of normative theories of taxation; and an examination of the history of the realization rule in taxation. In April 2004 Hasen organized a conference at the Law School on the taxation of modern financial instruments.

“Michigan’s international law faculty and curriculum were what attracted me to this Law School. The opportunities are outstanding. I feel fortunate to have developed relationships with several professors who continue to guide me as a young international lawyer.”

Sonia Boutilillon, ’03
Clerk for Judge Gilbert Guillaume at the International Court of Justice
ICJ University Traineeship Program
The Hague, The Netherlands

Daniel Halberstam

Professor Daniel Halberstam clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justice David H. Souter and Judge Patricia M. Wald of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, and was judicial fellow to Judge Peter Jann, European Court of Justice. He served as attorney-adviser in the Office of Legal Counsel, U.S. Department of Justice, and attorney-adviser to Chairman Robert Pitofsky, U.S. Federal Trade Commission. A graduate of Yale Law School, he was articles editor of the Yale Law Journal and editor of the Journal of Law and the Humanities. Halberstam earned his B.A., summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, in mathematics and psychology from Columbia College. He obtained his Abitur at the Gutenberg-Gymnasium in Wiesbaden, Germany. Halberstam specializes in European Union law, U.S. constitutional law, and comparative federalism. He was the founding director of the University’s European Union Center and serves on the advisory editorial board of Cambridge University Press’s European Law Studies and on the editorial board of Cambridge University Press’s Globalization and Society series. He has been a visiting professor in the tax departments of the University of Michigan, the University of California at Berkeley, and the National Tax Journal. He received a doctoral degree from the University of Michigan in 2000. His dissertation is titled “The Evolution of Corporate Taxation: A History of American Tax Policy, 1931-1976.”

James C. Hathaway is a leading authority on international refugee law whose work is regularly cited by the most senior courts of the common law world. He is director of the University of Michigan’s Program in Refugee and Asylum Law and Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford University’s Refugee Studies Program. Hathaway has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Tokyo and California, and regularly provides training on refugee law to academic, nongovernmental, and official audiences around the world. Among his more important publications are a leading treatise on the refugee definition, The Law of Refugee Status, and an interdisciplinary study of refugee law reform, Reconciling International Refugee Law. Hathaway established and directs the Refugee Caselaw Site (www.refugeecaselaw.org), is an editor of the Journal of Refugee Studies and the Immigration and Nationality Law Reports, and is completing work on his next book, The Rights of Refugees under International Law. He earned his J.S.D. and LL.M. at Columbia University, and an LL.B. at Osgoode Hall Law School of York University.

James C. Hathaway

James C. Hathaway is a leading authority on international refugee law whose work is regularly cited by the most senior courts of the common law world. He is director of the University of Michigan’s Program in Refugee and Asylum Law and Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford University’s Refugee Studies Program. Hathaway has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Tokyo and California, and regularly provides training on refugee law to academic, nongovernmental, and official audiences around the world. Among his more important publications are a leading treatise on the refugee definition, The Law of Refugee Status, and an interdisciplinary study of refugee law reform, Reconciling International Refugee Law. Hathaway established and directs the Refugee Caselaw Site (www.refugeecaselaw.org), is an editor of the Journal of Refugee Studies and the Immigration and Nationality Law Reports, and is completing work on his next book, The Rights of Refugees under International Law. He earned his J.S.D. and LL.M. at Columbia University, and an LL.B. at Osgoode Hall Law School of York University.

Daniel Halberstam

Daniel Halberstam

James C. Hathaway

James C. Hathaway is a leading authority on international refugee law whose work is regularly cited by the most senior courts of the common law world. He is director of the University of Michigan’s Program in Refugee and Asylum Law and Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford University’s Refugee Studies Program. Hathaway has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Tokyo and California, and regularly provides training on refugee law to academic, nongovernmental, and official audiences around the world. Among his more important publications are a leading treatise on the refugee definition, The Law of Refugee Status, and an interdisciplinary study of refugee law reform, Reconciling International Refugee Law. Hathaway established and directs the Refugee Caselaw Site (www.refugeecaselaw.org), is an editor of the Journal of Refugee Studies and the Immigration and Nationality Law Reports, and is completing work on his next book, The Rights of Refugees under International Law. He earned his J.S.D. and LL.M. at Columbia University, and an LL.B. at Osgoode Hall Law School of York University.
Samuel R. Gross

Samuel R. gross, the Thomas and Mable Long Professor of Law, teaches evidence, criminal procedure, and courses on the use of the social sciences in law. His published work has focused on the death penalty, false convictions, racial profiling, eyewitness identification, the use of expert witnesses, and the relationship between pretrial bargaining and trial outcomes. He graduated from Columbia College in 1968 and earned a J.D. from the University of California at Berkeley in 1973. Professor Gross worked as a criminal defense attorney in San Francisco for several years, and as an attorney with the United Farm Workers Union in California and the Wounded Knee Legal Defense Committee in Nebraska and South Dakota. As a cooperating attorney for the NAAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc. in New York and the National Jury Project in Oakland, California, he litigated a series of test cases on jury selection in capital trials and worked on the issue of racial discrimination in the use of the death penalty. He has been a visiting lecturer at Yale Law School, a visiting professor at Columbia Law School, and taught for several years at the Stanford Law School.

"The Law School's internship program allowed me to witness the International Law Commission's work and to participate through research and writing on the issues under discussion. Michigan students are fortunate to have an ILRC member as a regular visiting professor. He is both a leader in his field and genuinely committed to helping students."

Sean C. Grimsley, ’00
Former Judicial Clerk to Justice Sandra Day O’Connor, United States Supreme Court October Term 2003
Current Associate, Bartlit Beck Herman Palenchar & Scott LLP
Denver, Colorado

David M. Hasen

David M. Hasen joined the University of Michigan Law School faculty as an assistant professor in fall 2002. Professor Hasen’s areas of research and teaching include taxation, jurisprudence, and administrative law. He received a B.A. in history from Reed College, a Ph.D. in government from Harvard University, and a J.D. from Yale Law School, where he served as notes editor for the Yale Law Journal. Hasen clerked for Judge Marvine Cheesney in the Northern District of California and has worked as an associate in the tax departments of Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP and Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, where his practice focused on corporate taxation and the taxation of financial products. His current research projects include a paper dealing with the application of established tax principles to modern financial products; an analysis of normative theories of taxation; and an examination of the history of the realization rule in taxation. In April 2004 Hasen organized a conference at the Law School on the taxation of modern financial instruments.

"Michigan’s international law faculty and curriculum were what attracted me to this Law School. The opportunities are outstanding. I feel fortunate to have developed relationships with several professors who continue to guide me as a young international lawyer."

Sonia Boutillon, ’03
Clerk for Judge Gilbert Guillaume at the International Court of Justice
IJU University Traineeship Program
The Hague, The Netherlands

James C. Hathaway is a leading professor of international refugee law whose work is regularly cited by the most senior courts of the common law world. He is a director of the University of Michigan’s Program in Refugee and Asylum Law and Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford University’s Refugee Studies Program. Hathaway has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Tokyo and California, and regularly provides training on refugee law to academic, nongovernmental, and official audiences around the world. Among his more important publications are a leading treatise on the refugee definition, The Law of Refugee Status, and an interdisciplinary study of refugee law reform, Reconceiving International Refugee Law. Hathaway established and directs the Refugee Caselaw Site (www.refugeecaselaw.org), is an editor of the Journal of Refugee Studies and the Immigration and Nationality Law Reports, and is completing work on his next book, The Rights of Refugees under International Law. He earned his J.S.D. and LL.M. at Columbia University and an LL.B. at Osgoode Hall Law School of York University.
Don Herzog is the Edmund R. Sunderland Professor of Law. His main teaching interests are political, moral, legal, and social theory; constitutional interpretation; torts; and the First Amendment. He is the author of Without Foundations: Justification in Critical Theory, Happy Slaves: A Critique of Consent Theory, and Professoring the Minds of the Lower Orders. Professor Herzog holds an A.B. from Cornell University and both an A.M. and a Ph.D. from Harvard University, where he studied government. He joined the Political Science Department at the University of Michigan in 1983 and holds a joint appointment with that department and the Law School.

Jill R. Horwitz holds a B.A. from Northwestern University with honors in history, and an M.P.P., J.D., magna cum laude, and Ph.D. in health policy from Harvard University. Horwitz was an editor for the Harvard Journal on Legislation, a law clerk for Judge Norman Stahl of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, and a law clerk for Judge Alan L. Frisch of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. She is the author of an AB. from Cornell University and both an AM. and a Ph.D. from Harvard University. Horwitz has also written on health care organization conversions from nonprofit to for-profit ownership, medical malpractice tort replacement, and medical quality. She has been public affairs director for the Planned Parenthood Association of San Mateo County and a teaching fellow in history at Phillips Academy. She is a member of the bar of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Horwitz joined the Michigan Law faculty in 2003.

Michigan’s highly acclaimed Legal Practice Program was the first of its kind in the United States. Our students receive individualized instruction in legal research and analysis, persuasive legal writing, and oral advocacy from full-time legal practice professors, each an expert in the craft of legal writing.

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law, a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international institutions such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B. with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an LL.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law, a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international institutions such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B. with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an LL.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

Jill R. Horwitz's research and teaching interests include health law, nonprofit corporations, empirical research methods, law and economics, and torts. She has recently won dissertation awards from Academy Health and the National Academy of Social Insurance for her work on hospital ownership and medical service provision. Horwitz has also written on health care organization conversions from nonprofit to for-profit ownership, medical malpractice tort replacement, and medical quality. She holds a B.A. from Northwestern University with honors in history, and an M.P.P., J.D., magna cum laude, and Ph.D. in health policy from Harvard University. Horwitz was an editor for the Harvard Journal on Legislation, a law clerk for Judge Norman Stahl of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, and a member of the bar of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Horwitz joined the Michigan Law faculty in 2003.

Michigan’s highly acclaimed Legal Practice Program was the first of its kind in the United States. Our students receive individualized instruction in legal research and analysis, persuasive legal writing, and oral advocacy from full-time legal practice professors, each an expert in the craft of legal writing.

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law, a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international institutions such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B. with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an LL.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law, a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international institutions such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B. with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an LL.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

Roderick M. Hills Jr. teaches, researches, and writes on comparative federalism; race, class, and land; educational law; introduction to constitutional law; jurisdiction and choice of law; and local government. His articles have appeared in such journals as the Howard Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and the Supreme Court Review. Professor Hills is also a cooperating counsel with the Michigan branch of the ACLU and has written several briefs on behalf of other organizations including Boustead v. McGinnes in which he argued that the Michigan Department of Corrections' visitation policies violated visiting parents' 14th Amendment rights to familial association. He earned his B.A. and J.D. degrees at Yale University and was a Century Fellow with the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago. While attending law school, Hills was a member of the Yale Law Journal and co-editor in chief of the Yale Journal of Law & Humanities. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for the Hon. Patrick Higginbotham of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and prior to joining the U-M faculty he taught at the University of Colorado School of Law.
Don Herzog

Don Herzog is the Edison R. Sunderland Professor of Law. His main teaching interests are political, moral, legal, and social theory; constitutional interpretation; torts; and the First Amendment. He is the author of Without Foundations: Justification in Consent Theory, Happy Slaves: A Critique of Consent Theory, and Raising the Minds of the Lower Orders. Professor Herzog holds an A.B. from Cornell University and both an A.M. and a Ph.D. from Harvard University, where he studied government. He joined the Political Science Department at the University of Michigan in 1983 and holds a joint appointment with that department and the Law School.

Jill R. Horwitz

Jill R. Horwitz's research and teaching interests include health law, nonprofit corporations, empirical research methods, law and economics, and torts. She has recently won dissertation awards from Academy Health and the National Academy of Social Insurance for her work on hospital ownership and medical service provision. Horwitz has also written on health care organization conversions from nonprofit to for-profit ownership, medical malpractice tort replacement, and medical quality. She holds a B.A. from Northwestern University with honors in history, and an M.P.S., J.D., magna cum laude, and Ph.D. in health policy from Harvard University. Horwitz was an editor for the Harvard Journal on Legislation. Following law school, she served as a law clerk for Judge Norman Stahl of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. As a doctoral student, Horwitz held graduate fellowships at Harvard University's Haisser Center for Nonprofit Organizations (2000-2002) and Center for Ethics and the Professions (2000-2001). Following graduate school, she was appointed post-doctoral fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research. Horwitz has been public affairs director for the Planned Parenthood Association of San Mateo County and a teaching fellow in history at Phillips Academy. She is a member of the bar of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Horwitz joined the Michigan Law faculty in 2003.

Michigan's highly acclaimed Legal Practice Program was the first of its kind in the United States. Our students receive individualized instruction in legal research and analysis, persuasive legal writing, and oral advocacy from full-time legal practice professors, each an expert in the craft of legal writing.

Roderick M. Hills Jr.

Roderick M. Hills Jr. teaches, researches, and writes on comparative federalism; race, class, and land; educational law; introduction to constitutional law; jurisdiction and choice of law; land use controls; and local government. His articles have appeared in such journals as the Howard Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and the Supreme Court Review. Professor Hills is also a cooperating counsel with the Michigan branch of the ACLU and has written several briefs on behalf of other organizations including Bazzetta v. McGinnis in which he argued that the Michigan Department of Corrections' visitation policies violated visiting parents' 14th Amendment rights to familial association. He earned his B.A. and J.D. degrees at Yale University and was a Century Fellow with the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago. While attending law school, Hills was a member of the Yale Law Journal and co-editor-in-chief of the Yale Journal of Law & Humanities. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for the Hon. Patrick Higginbotham of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and prior to joining the U-M faculty he taught at the University of Colorado School of Law.

Robert L. Howse

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law; a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international organizations such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B., with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an L.L.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

Robert L. Howse is an internationally recognized authority on international trade law and the coauthor of a leading treatise in the field, The Regulation of International Trade. His many publications also include works on legal and political philosophy and federalism. He serves as an American Law Institute Reporter on WTO Law; a member of the faculty of the World Trade Institute and a regular visiting professor at Osgoode Hall Law School, Toronto. He often advises or consults with international organizations such as the UN and the OECD as well as NGOs and the private sector. Professor Howse has taught at Harvard, Toronto and Tel Aviv universities and in the Academy of European Law, European University Institute, Florence. He received his B.A. in philosophy and political science with high distinction, as well as an LL.B., with honors, from the University of Toronto. He also holds an L.L.M. from the Harvard Law School. Between 1983 and 1986, he served in the Canadian Foreign Ministry, including on the Policy Planning Secretariat.

"The Legal Practice professors at the Law School are eminently qualified. My summer employers were stunned at the quality of the work I did, primarily because they did not expect this caliber of work from a first-year student. I kept a notebook of assignments and examples from the class and took it to work. At some point during the summer, I used each type of writing we had covered in class. Other summer associates, not from the University of Michigan, even borrowed my notebook and used it to help them write their assignments."

Michael A. Satz, '00
Counsel, Nissan North America Inc.
Dallas, Texas

Douglas A. Kahn

Ellen D. Katz teaches and writes in the areas of property, voting rights and elections, legal history, and equal protection. Prior to joining the Law School faculty in 1999, she practiced as an attorney with the appellate sections of the U.S. Department of Justice's Environment and Natural Resources Division and its Civil Division. Professor Katz also served as a judicial clerk for Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States, and for Judge Judith W. Rogers of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. She earned her B.A. in History, summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Yale College and her J.D. from Yale Law School, where she served as an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. Her recent articles include "Resourcing the White Primary" 153 U. Pa. L. Rev. (forthcoming 2004), and "In defending the rule of law, we must first make sure that the rules are fair and just. That is where the law school's Legal Practice Program comes in. It gives me the skills necessary to write good Law School exams, to participate in the editing of legal journals, to perform well in summer associate positions, and to land a federal appellate clerkship."

Emily Palacios, '02
Associate, Miller Canfield Paddock & Stone
Ann Arbor, Michigan

Ellen D. Katz

Thomas E. Kauper, the Henry M. Butzel Professor of Law, is an antitrust expert. In recent years, he has focused on international antitrust and competition policy of the European Union. Professor Kauper has twice served in ranking positions with the United States Department of Justice, first as deputy assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel and then as assistant attorney general in charge of the Antitrust Division, the chief enforcement officer in that field. In these positions, he worked on matters ranging from executive power and treaty obligations to the application of American antitrust laws to international transactions and conduct abroad. He also served for 14 years as a member of the American Bar Association Council of the Antitrust Section and for one year as vice-chairman of the Section. Most recently, Kauper spent the winter 2003 semester as the John M. Oliva Visiting Professor of Business Economics, and Law at Harvard Law School. Professor Kauper has written in the fields of property and antitrust, and is coauthor of Property: An Introduction to the Concept and the Institution. He earned both his A.B. and J.D. degrees at the University of Michigan. Following a clerkship with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, he practiced law in Chicago and began his academic career at the Law School in 1964.

"Toward a reasonable reconstruction of the antitrust law..." 154 Mich. L. Rev. (forthcoming 2004), and his areas of research and teaching interest include corporate law, securities fraud and regulation, corporate crime, corporate and managerial liability, corporate governance in emerging markets, and law and economics. Professor Khanna's papers have been accepted for publication in the Harvard Law Review, Boston University Law Review, and the Georgetown Law Journal amongst others. He has also presented papers at Harvard Law School, Columbia University Law School, and others.

Vikramaditya S. Khanna

Prior to joining the Law School faculty in fall 2004, Professor Vikramaditya S. Khanna served on the Boston University School of Law faculty. He earned his S.J.D. at Harvard Law School, Professor Khanna has been visiting faculty at Harvard Law School, a senior research fellow at Columbia Law School, and a visiting scholar at Stanford Law School. He is a recipient of the John M. Oliva Faculty Fellowship for 2002-2003, and his areas of research and teaching interest include corporate law, securities fraud and regulation, corporate crime, corporate and managerial liability, corporate governance in emerging markets, and law and economics. Professor Khanna's papers have been accepted for publication in the Harvard Law Review, Boston University Law Review, and the Georgetown Law Journal amongst others. He has also presented papers at Harvard Law School, Columbia University Law School, and others.

Vikramaditya S. Khanna

“The Legal Practice professors at the Law School are eminently qualified. My summer employers were stunned at the quality of the work I did, primarily because they did not expect this caliber of work from a first-year student. I kept a notebook of assignments and examples from the class and took it to work. At some point during the summer, I used each type of writing we had covered in class. Other summer associates, not from the University of Michigan, even borrowed my notebook and used it to help them write their assignments.”

Michael A. Satz, ’00 Counsel, Nissan North America Inc.
Dallas, Texas

Ellen D. Katz teaches and writes in the areas of property, voting rights and elections, legal history, and equal protection. Prior to joining the Law School faculty in 1999, she practiced as an attorney with the appellate sections of the U.S. Department of Justice’s Environment and Natural Resources Division and its Civil Division. Professor Katz also served as a judicial clerk for Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States, and for Judge Judith V. Rogers of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. She earned her B.A. in History, Summa Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Yale College and her J.D. from Yale Law School, where she served as an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. Her recent articles include “Reconsidering the White Primary” (forthcoming 2004), and “Reinforcing Representation: Congressional Power to Enforce the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments in the Rehnquist and Waite Courts,” Mich. L. Rev. (2003).

Thomas E. Kauper, the Henry M. Butel Professor of Law, is an antitrust expert. In recent years, he has focused on international antitrust and competition policy of the European Union. Professor Kauper has twice served in ranking positions with the United States Department of Justice, first as deputy assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel and then as assistant attorney general in charge of the Antitrust Division, the chief enforcement officer in that field.

In these positions, he worked on matters ranging from executive power and treaty obligations to the application of American antitrust laws to international transactions and conduct abroad. He also served for 14 years as a member of the American Bar Association Council of the Antitrust Section and for one year as vice-chairman of the Section. Most recently, Kauper spent the winter 2002 semester as the John M. Olin Visiting Professor of Business, Economics, and Law at Harvard Law School.

Prior to joining the Law School faculty in fall 2004, Professor Vikramaditya S. Khanna served on the Boston University School of Law Faculty. He earned his S.J.D. at Harvard Law School. Professor Khanna has been visiting faculty at Harvard Law School, a senior research fellow at Columbia Law School, and a visiting scholar at Stanford Law School. He is a recipient of the John M. Olin Faculty Fellowship for 2002-2003, and his areas of research and teaching interest include corporate law, securities and corporate fraud and regulation, corporate crime, corporate and managerial liability, corporate governance in emerging markets, and law and economics. Professor Khanna’s papers have been accepted for publication in the Harvard Law Review, Boston University Law Review, and the Georgetown Law Journal amongst others. He has also presented papers at Harvard Law School, Columbia University School of Law, American Law & Economics Association Annual Meeting, University of Michigan Law School, University of Southern California Law School, University of California at Berkeley Law School, the National Bureau of Economic Research, Wharton Business School, and Stanford Law School amongst others.

Vikramaditya S. Khanna

Ellen D. Katz

Douglas A. Kahn

Thomas E. Kauper

Emily Palacios, ’02 Associate, Miller Canfield Paddock & Stone
Ann Arbor, Michigan
James E. Krier

James E. Krier is the Earl Warren DeLano Professor of Law. His teaching and research interests are primarily in the fields of property, environmental law and policy and law and economics, and he teaches courses on property, trusts and estates, environmental law and policy, and pollution policy. Professor Krier is the author or coauthor of several books, including Environmental Law and Policy, Pollution and Policy, and Property (5th edition), while his recent articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review and the Supreme Court Economic Review. He earned his B.S. with honors and his J.D. with highest honors from the University of Wisconsin where he was articles editor of the Wisconsin Law Review After his graduation from law school in 1966 he served for one year as law clerk to the Hon. Roger J. Traynor, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, and then practiced law for two years with Arnold & Porter in Washington, D.C. He was a professor of law at UCLA and Stanford before joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1983 and has been a visiting professor at both Harvard University Law School and Cardozo School of Law.

“...who are experienced lawyers and academics, teach you not simply the basics of legal research and writing, but how to be extremely successful at it. My legal writing education prepared me well for my summer internships and gave me an advantage over other interns, so that I was able to make direct and immediate contributions to real cases. Further, it enabled me to secure a federal clerkship and perform consistently at the high level demanded by the judge.”

Marcela Sanchez, '01
Associate, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw
Chicago, Illinois

Rochelle E. Lento

Rochelle E. Lento is a clinical law professor and has been the director of the Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic (LAUC) since 1991. LAUC provides legal assistance to non-profit community development corporations and trains law students in transactional skills. Lento is a graduate of the SUNY/College at Rotgistan, and the University of Detroit Law School. Her career before and since graduation has centered on the problems of cities. Lento has become active locally and nationally on issues of affordable housing and community development law. Nationally, Lento served as associate and chief editor of the ABA Journal of Affordable Housing and Community Development Law from 1997-2001. She is on the Governing Committee of the ABA Forum on Affordable Housing and Community Development Law and, in 2002 co-chaired its 11th National Conference. Locally, she serves on the boards of Community Legal Resources, Federal Reserve Advisory Board, Friends School of Detroit, and her own neighborhood association.

“...Michigan’s reputation within the legal profession depends primarily upon the legal skills of its graduates. The praise I received for the quality of my legal writing and research the summer I clerked for Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue is the best evidence I can offer for why Michigan is one of the premier law schools in the nation. Indeed, I cannot imagine how any legal education could be complete absent the individualized instruction in legal research and analysis that Michigan’s Legal Practice Program provides its students.”

Eric Goodman, '02
Associate, Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue
Cleveland, Ohio

Professor Kyle Logue teaches in the areas of tax, torts, and insurance. His scholarly interests include tax policy compensation and insurance arrangements (both public and private), products liability and risk regulation, disaster policy, legal transitions, and distributive justice. Professor Logue’s articles have appeared in a variety of journals, including the Chicago Law Review, the Cornell Law, the Michigan Law, the Touro Law Review, the Virginia Law Review, and the Yale Law Journal. Professor Logue has presented papers at numerous academic conferences and scholarly workshops around the country. He consults and provides expert testimony in areas of insurance law and regulation, insurance policy interpretation, and insurance industry practices. Professor Logue earned his B.A., summa cum laude, from Auburn University, where he was a National Harry S. Truman Scholar, and his J.D. from Yale Law School, where he was an Olin Scholar, and an articles editor for the Yale Law Journal. Before coming to the University of Michigan, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Patrick H. Hughes in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and worked as a lawyer in a law firm of Sutherland Asbill & Brennan in Atlanta, Georgia.

Kyle D. Logue

Professor Richard O. Lempert is the Eric Stein Distinguished University Professor of Law and Sociology. The recipient of the Law & Society Association’s Harry Kalven Jr. Prize for outstanding socio-legal scholarship and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, he has applied social science research to legal issues in the areas of juvenile capital punishment, and the use of statistical and social science evidence by courts. His book, A Modern Approach to Evidence, originally published in 1977 and in its third edition (with Sam Gross and James Liebman as coauthors), is still a leading text on evidence. Professor Lempert is also the co-author of An Invitation to Law and Social Science, and co-editor of Under the Influence: Drugs and the American Work Force. His articles regularly appear in prestigious journals. A graduate of Oberlin College and the U-M Law School, he also holds a Ph.D. in sociology from the U-M. In 2000, Lempert was named founding director of the University’s Life Sciences, Values, and Society Program (LSVSP). He is currently on leave, serving as division director for the Social and Economic Sciences at the National Science Foundation.

“...James E. Krier is the Earl Warren DeLano Professor of Law. His teaching and research interests are primarily in the fields of property, environmental law and policy and law and economics, and he teaches courses on property, trusts and estates, behavioral law and economics, and pollution policy. Professor Krier is the author or coauthor of several books, including Environmental Law and Policy, Pollution and Policy, and Property (5th edition), while his recent articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review and the Supreme Court Economic Review.

Richard O. Lempert

Richard O. Lempert
James E. Krier

James E. Krier is the Earl Warren DeLano Professor of Law. His teaching and research interests are primarily in the fields of property, environmental law and policy and law and economics, and he teaches courses on property, trusts and estates, behavioral law and economics, and pollution policy. Professor Krier is the author or coauthor of several books, including Environmental Law and Policy, Pollution and Policy, and Property (5th edition), while his recent articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review and the Supreme Court Economic Review. He earned his B.S. with honors and his J.D. with highest honors from the University of Wisconsin where he was articles editor of the Wisconsin Law Review. After his graduation from law school in 1966 he served for one year as law clerk to the Hon. Roger J. Traynor, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, and then practiced law for two years with Arnold & Porter in Washington, D.C. He was a professor of law at UCLA and Stanford before joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1983. He has been a visiting professor at both Harvard University Law School and Cardozo School of Law.

"What distinguishes Michigan's Legal Practice Program from any other law school is that the professors, who are experienced lawyers and academics, teach you not simply the basics of legal research and writing, but how to be extremely successful at it. My legal writing education prepared me well for my summer internships and gave me an advantage over other interns, so that I was able to make direct and immediate contributions to real cases. Further, it enabled me to secure a federal clerkship and perform consistently at the high level demanded by the judge."

Marcela Sanchez, '01
Associate, Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw
Chicago, Illinois

Rochelle E. Lento

Rochelle E. Lento is a clinical law professor and has been the director of the Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic (LAUC) since 1991. LAUC provides legal assistance to non-profit community development corporations and trains law students in transactional skills. Lento is a graduate of the SUNY/College at Utica and the University of Detroit Law School. Her career before and since graduation has centered on the problems of cities. Lento has become active locally and nationally on issues of affordable housing and community development law. Nationally, Lento served as associate and chief editor of the ABA Journal of Affordable Housing and Community Development Law (1997-2001). She is on the Governing Committee of the ABA Forum on Affordable Housing and Community Development Law, and in 2002 co-chaired its 11th National Conference. Locally, she serves on the boards of Community Legal Resources, Federal Reserve Advisory Board, Friends School of Detroit, and her own neighborhood association.

"Michigan's reputation within the legal profession depends primarily upon the legal skills of its graduates. The praise I received for the quality of my legal writing and research the summer I clerked for Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue is the best evidence I can offer for why Michigan is one of the premier law schools in the nation. Indeed, I cannot imagine how any legal education could be complete absent the individualized instruction in legal research and analysis that Michigan's Legal Practice Program provides its students."

Eric Goodman, '02
Associate, Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue
Cleveland, Ohio

Richard O. Lempert

Richard O. Lempert is the Eric Stein Distinguished University Professor of Law and Sociology. The recipient of the Law & Society Association’s Harry Kalven Jr. Prize for outstanding socio-legal scholarship and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, he has applied social science research to legal issues in the areas of property, capital punishment, and the use of statistical and social science evidence by courts. His book, A Modern Approach to Evidence, originally published in 1977 and in its third edition (with Sam Gross and James Liebman as coauthors), is still a leading textbook on evidence. Professor Lempert is also the co-author of An Invitation to Law and Social Science, and co-editor of Under the Influence? Drugs and the American Work Force. His articles regularly appear in prestigious journals. A graduate of Oberlin College and the U-M Law School, he also holds a Ph.D. in sociology from the U-M. In 2000, Lempert was named founding director of the University’s Life Sciences, Values, and Society Program (LSVP). He is currently on leave, serving as division director for the Social and Economic Sciences at the National Science Foundation.

Kyle D. Logue

Professor Kyle Logue teaches in the areas of tax, torts, and insurance. His scholarly interests include tax policy, compensation and insurance arrangements (both public and private), products liability and risk regulation, disaster policy, legal transitions, and distributive justice. Professor Logue’s articles have appeared in a variety of journals, including the Chicago Law Review, the Cornell Law Review, the Michigan Law Review, the Tax Lawyer, the Virginia Law Review, and the Yale Law Journal. Professor Logue has presented papers at numerous academic conferences and scholarly workshops around the country. He consults and provides expert testimony in the areas of insurance law and regulation, insurance policy interpretation, and insurance industry practices. Professor Logue earned his B.A. cum laude from Auburn University, where he was a National Harry S. Truman Scholar, and his J.D. from Yale Law School, where he was an Olin Scholar and an articles editor for the Yale Law Journal. Before coming to the University of Michigan, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Patrick E. Higginbotham on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and worked as a lawyer for the law firm of Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan in Atlanta, Georgia.
Catharine A. MacKinnon

poorness as a civil rights violation. The Supreme Court of Canada accepted her approaches to equality, pornography, and hate speech. Her 10 scholarly books include Sex Equality (2001), Toward a Feminist Theory of the State (1989), and Only Words (1993). She has published in scholarly journals, the popular press, and in many languages. She has represented Muslim and Croat Bosnian women survivors of Serbian genocidal sexual atrocities since 1992, winning with co-counsel a damage award of $745 million in August 2000. Their case, Kosic v. Karadzic, pioneered the recognition of rape as an act of genocide. She co-directs the Lawyers Alliance for Women and Girls (LAW) Project of Equality Now, an NGO promoting international sex equality rights for women. Professor MacKinnon holds a B.A. from Smith College, a J.D. from Yale Law School, and a Ph.D. in political science from Yale. She is one of the most widely-cited legal scholars in English.

The University of Michigan Law School faculty play a prominent role in shaping law and effecting change, at home and abroad, through scholarship, law reform, and legal practice.

Nina A. Mendelson

Nina A. Mendelson joined the Michigan faculty after four years as an attorney with the Department of Justice's Office of Women in the Arts and Business, and, with Croat Bosnian women survivors of Serbian genocidal sexual atrocities since 1992, winning with co-counsel a damage award of $745 million in August 2000. Their case, Kosic v. Karadzic, pioneered the recognition of rape as an act of genocide. She co-directs the Lawyers Alliance for Women and Girls (LAW) Project of Equality Now, an NGO promoting international sex equality rights for women. Professor MacKinnon holds a B.A. from Smith College, a J.D. from Yale Law School, and a Ph.D. in political science from Yale. She is one of the most widely-cited legal scholars in English.

Anna Leigh Thomas, the Thomas Neville Award for outstanding pro bono service.

William I. Miller

William I. Miller, the Thomas G. Long Professor of Law, has been a member of the University of Michigan faculty since 1984. Students have found that his bloodfeuds course equips them to handle cases as well as arguments in courtrooms. His research used to center on saga bloodfeuds, but has focused on domestic violence, and, in the past decade, on sexuality. In addition to his general research on bloodfeuds, he has written on the Daoist concept of fudou, on the mystery of courage, and on the history of theคอร์น์. His research has included the study of the military, legal, and social impacts of bloodfeuds and the legal and moral justifications for bloodfeuds. His work has been published in a number of law reviews and journals, and he has received both a Ph.D. in English and a J.D. from Yale. He has also been a visiting professor at Yale, the University of Chicago, the University of Bergen, and Harvard.

The University of Michigan Law School faculty play a prominent role in shaping law and effecting change, at home and abroad, through scholarship, law reform, and legal practice.

Bridget M. McCormack, who is associate dean for clinical affairs, is also a clinical professor of law with the Michigan Clinical Law Program teaching a criminal defense clinic, a domestic violence clinic, and a pediatric advocacy clinic. Before joining the faculty, McCormack was a Robert P. Cover Fellow at Yale Law School. As a Cover Fellow, she taught and supervised students in the Criminal Defense Clinic and the Prison Litigation Clinic. McCormack earned her law degree from New York University School of Law where she was a Root-Tilden scholar and a B.A. with honors in political science and philosophy from Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut. She has worked as a staff attorney with the Office of the Appellate Defender and she was a senior trial attorney with the Criminal Defense Division of the Legal Aid Society both in New York City. McCormack has been published in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review and wrote, with Andrea Lyon, the Criminal Defense Motion Manual for the State Appellate Defender's Office. McCormack's current clinical practice, as well as her research and scholarship, focuses on criminal justice, and she has won a National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers' Advocacy Spring Training Scholarship to work with the Colorado Public Defender's Office.

Bridget M. McCormack

Anna Leigh Thomas, the Thomas Neville Award for outstanding pro bono service.

William I. Miller

William I. Miller, the Thomas G. Long Professor of Law, has been a member of the University of Michigan faculty since 1984. Students have found that his bloodfeuds course equips them to handle cases as well as arguments in courtrooms. His research used to center on saga bloodfeuds, but has focused on domestic violence, and, in the past decade, on sexuality. In addition to his general research on bloodfeuds, he has written on the Daoist concept of fudou, on the mystery of courage, and on the history of theคอร์น. His research has included the study of the military, legal, and social impacts of bloodfeuds and the legal and moral justifications for bloodfeuds. His work has been published in a number of law reviews and journals, and he has received both a Ph.D. in English and a J.D. from Yale. He has also been a visiting professor at Yale, the University of Chicago, the University of Bergen, and Harvard.
Bridget M. McCormack, who is associate dean for clinical affairs, is also a clinical professor of law with the Michigan Clinical Law Program teaching a criminal defense clinic, a domestic violence clinic, and a pediatric advocacy clinic. Before joining the faculty, McCormack was a Robert M. Cover Fellow at Yale Law School. As a Cover Fellow, she taught and supervised students in the Community Legal Services Clinic and the Prison Litigation Clinic. McCormack earned her law degree from New York University School of Law where she was a Root-Tilden scholar and her B.A. with honors in political science and philosophy from Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut. She has worked as a staff attorney with the Office of the Appellate Defender and she was a senior trial attorney with the Criminal Defense Division of the Legal Aid Society both in New York City. McCormack has been published in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review and wrote, with Andrea Lyon, the Criminal Defense Motion Manual for the State Appellate Defender’s Office. McCormack’s current clinical practice, as well as her research and scholarship, focuses on women charged with crimes against their partners.

William I. Miller is the Thomas G. Long Professor of Law. He has been a member of the University of Michigan faculty since 1984. Students have found that his Bloodfeuds course equips them to handle axies as well as arguments in courtrooms. His research used to center on saga behind-from whence the materials studied in the Bloodfeuds class and his book Bloodtaking and Peacemaking. He presently writes on emotions, mostly unpleasant, ones involving self-assessment, and select vices and virtues. Thus his books The Mystery of Courage, The Anatomy of Disgust, Humiliation, and Faking It (2003), which deals with anxieties of role, identity, and posturings of authenticity. The Anatomy of Disgust was named the best book of 1997 in anthropology/sociology by the Association of American Publishers. Professor Miller earned his B.A. from the University of Wisconsin and received both a Ph.D. in English and a J.D. from Yale. He has also been a visiting professor at Yale, the University of Chicago, the University of Bergen, and Harvard.

Bridget M. McCormack

Catherine A. MacKinnon

Nina A. Mendelson joined the Michigan faculty after four years as an attorney with the Department of Justice in Canada. She is also a clinical professor of law with the Michigan Clinical Law Program teaching a criminal defense practice. She earned her B.A. in economics, summa cum laude, from Harvard University, where she was Phi Beta Kappa. Her J.D. is from Yale Law School, where she was an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. After law school, she clerked for Judge Pierre Leval in the Southern District of New York and for Judge John Walker Jr. ’64, on the Second Circuit.

The University of Michigan Law School faculty play a prominent role in shaping law and effecting change, at home and abroad, through scholarship, law reform, and legal practice.

Nina A. Mendelson

Bridget M. McCormack

Catharine A. MacKinnon, Elizabeth A. Long Professor of Law, specializes in sex equality issues under international and constitutional law. She has taught at Yale, Chicago, Harvard, Osgoode Hall, Stanford, Basel (Switzerland), and Columbia, and practices and consults nationally and internationally. She pioneered the legal claim for sexual harassment, establishing it before the U.S. Supreme Court, and, with Andrea Dworkin, created ordinances recognizing pornography as a civil rights violation. The Supreme Court of Canada accepted her approaches to equality, pornography, and hate speech. Her 10 scholarly books include Sex Equality (2001), Toward a Feminist Theory of the State (1989), and Only Words (1993). She has published in scholarly journals, the popular press, and in many languages. She has represented Muslim and Croat Bosnian women survivors internationally. She specializes in sex equality issues in the United States, and in Canada accepted her approaches to equality, pornography, and hate speech. She has earned an A.B. in history and government from Smith College, a J.D. from Yale Law School, and a Ph.D. in political science from Yale. She is one of the most widely-cited legal scholars in English.

Catharine A. MacKinnon

William I. Miller

Nina A. Mendelson has also served as a fellow to the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works and practiced law with Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe of Seattle, where she litigated and advised clients on environmental, corporate, and land-use matters. She also won the Washington State Bar Association’s Thomas Neville Award for outstanding pro bono service.

William I. Miller
Edward A. Parson

Edward A. Parson's interests include environmental policy, particularly its international dimensions; the political economy of regulation; the role of science and technology in policy and regulation; and the analysis of negotiations, collective decisions, and conflicts. His book Protecting the Ozone Layer: Science and Policy won the 2004 Harold and Margaret Sprout Award of the International Studies Association.

Recent articles have appeared in Science, Climatic Change, Policy Sciences, Issues in Science and Technology, and the Annual Review of Energy and the Environment. Parson has worked for the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, the U.S. Congress Office of Technology Assessment, the Privy Council Office of Canada, and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. He served on the NAS Committee on Human Dimensions of Global Change and on the U.S. National Assessment of Impacts of Climate Change. He holds degrees in physics (Toronto) and management science (British Columbia), and a Ph.D. in public policy from Harvard. He was formerly a professional classical musician.

"In addition to producing cutting-edge scholarship, University of Michigan Law faculty members make their voices heard through direct involvement in legal disputes — by writing amicus briefs, participating in impact litigation, and bringing claims for individual clients."

Corinne Beckwith, '92
Public Defender Service of the District of Columbia

Sallyanne Payton

Sallyanne Payton, the William W. Cook Professor of Law, came to Michigan in 1976 from Washington, D.C., where she was chief counsel for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. Payton was associated with Covington & Burling. She teaches Administrative Law and has served as a public member and senior fellow of the Administrative Conference of the United States and as chair of the Administrative Law Section of the Association of American Law Schools. Her industry specialty is health law; she has been active in the effort to reform federal health care financing and regulation. She is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration. Professor Payton holds both B.A. and LL.B. degrees from Stanford University.

John A.E. Pottow

John A.E. Pottow focuses on bankruptcy and commercial law, with particular research interest in international bankruptcy. Pottow earned his J.D., magna cum laude, at Harvard Law School, where he also served as treasurer of the Harvard Law Review. While a law student, Pottow worked with Professor Anthony Miller on the supplement to Wright, Miller, and Cooper's monumental Federal Practice, Procedure and Jurisdiction.

"The faculty bring life to their scholarship by being involved in the life of the law. One torts professor is managing a tort suit against the Michigan Department of Corrections; one civil rights professor is a volunteer attorney for the ACLU; one constitutional law professor regularly writes amicus briefs in constitutional law cases. The Michigan faculty's multi-faceted experience makes for a more comprehensive legal education."

Amy Y. Liu, '02
Associate, Sommesein Nath & Rosenthal LLP
Washington, D.C.

Roshunda L. Price

Roshunda L. Price is a member of the Law School's Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic (LAUC). Prior to joining the clinic staff in 2004, she served as senior counsel with L.R. Sowell & Associates, PLLC in Detroit. Her responsibilities included providing a full array of business legal services to corporations, partnerships, and other entities. Price's other experience has included serving as the staff attorney for LAUC; assistant corporation counsel for Wayne County, Michigan; senior attorney, Business Practice, for ANR Pipeline Company in Detroit; and associate attorney, Business and Commercial Practice, with Howard & Howard Attorneys, PLC in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable John Feikens, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan. Price earned her J.D. at the University of Michigan Law School and a B.B.A. from the U-M Business School. While earning her law degree, Price served as a contributing editor for the Michigan Journal of International Law. Price is also a Certified Public Accountant and licensed real estate broker. She is active in the State Bar of Michigan, having served as the chair of the Young Lawyers Section and the American Bar Association where she currently serves as delegate to the House of Delegates.
Edward A. Parson

Edward A. Parson's interests include environmental policy, particularly its international dimensions; the political economy of regulation; the role of science and technology in policy and regulation; and the analysis of negotiations, collective decisions, and conflicts. His book Protecting the Ozone Layer: Science and Strategy won the 2004 Harold and Margaret Sprout Award of the International Studies Association.

Recent articles have appeared in Science, Climatic Change, Policy Sciences, Issues in Science and Technology, and the Annual Review of Energy and the Environment. Parson has worked for the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, the U.S. Congress Office of Technology Assessment, the Privy Council, Office of Canada, and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. He served on the NAS Committee on Human Dimensions of Global Change and on the U.S. National Assessment of Impacts of Climate Change. He holds degrees in physics (Toronto) and management science (British Columbia), and a Ph.D. in public policy from Harvard. He was formerly a professional classical musician.

"In addition to producing cutting-edge scholarship, University of Michigan Law faculty members make their voices heard through direct involvement in legal disputes — by writing amicus briefs, participating in impact litigation, and bringing claims for individual clients."

Corinne Beckwith, '92
Public Defender Service of the District of Columbia

Sallyanne Payton

Sallyanne Payton, the William W. Cook Professor of Law, came to Michigan in 1976 from Washington, D.C., where she was chief counsel for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. She was staff assistant to the President on the Domestic Council staff in the private practice of law she was associated with Cowington & Burling. She teaches Administrative Law and has served as a public member and senior fellow of the Administrative Conference of the United States and as chair of the Administrative Law Section of the Association of American Law Schools. Her industry specialty is health law; she has been active in the effort to reform federal health care financing and regulation. She is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration. Professor Payton holds both B.A. and LL.B. degrees from Stanford University.

John A.E. Pottow

John A.E. Pottow focuses on bankruptcy and commercial law, with particular research interest in international bankruptcy. Pottow earned his J.D., magna cum laude, and Phi Beta Kappa, at Harvard College. Pottow clerked for judges in two countries: the Rt. Hon. Beverley McLachlin of the Supreme Court of Canada and the Hon. Guido Calabresi of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. He practiced law for several years, most recently with Weil, Gotshal, and Manges LLP. Additionally, Pottow has undertaken a variety of pro bono cases including Supreme Court consumer bankruptcy litigation and gender and other asylum relief for foreign nationals fleeing to the United States.

"The faculty bring life to their scholarship by being involved in the life of the law. One torts professor is managing a tort suit against the Michigan Department of Corrections; one civil rights professor is a volunteer attorney for the ACLU; one constitutional law professor regularly writes amicus briefs in constitutional law cases. The Michigan faculty's multi-faceted experience projects into the classroom and makes for a more comprehensive legal education."

Amy Y. Liu, '02
Associate, Sommesein Nath & Rosenthal LLP
Washington, D.C.

Roshunda L. Price

Roshunda L. Price is a member of the Law School's Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic (LAUC). Prior to joining the clinic staff in 2004, she served as senior counsel with L.R. Sowell & Associates PLLC in Detroit. Her responsibilities included providing a full array of business legal services to corporations, partnerships, and other entities. Price's other experience has included serving as the staff attorney for LAUC; assistant corporation counsel for Wayne County, Michigan; senior attorney, Business Practice, for ANR Pipeline Company in Detroit; and associate attorney, Business and Commercial Practice, with Howard & Howard Attorneys PC in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable John Fekens, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan. Price earned her J.D. at the University of Michigan Law School and a B.B.A. from the U-M Business School. While earning her law degree, Price served as a contributing editor for the Michigan Journal of International Law. Price is also a certified Public Accountant and licensed real estate broker. She is active in the State Bar of Michigan, having served as the chair of the Young Lawyers Section and the American Bar Association where she currently serves as delegate to the House of Delegates.

"The faculty bring life to their scholarship by being involved in the life of the law. One torts professor is managing a tort suit against the Michigan Department of Corrections; one civil rights professor is a volunteer attorney for the ACLU; one constitutional law professor regularly writes amicus briefs in constitutional law cases. The Michigan faculty's multi-faceted experience projects into the classroom and makes for a more comprehensive legal education."

Amy Y. Liu, '02
Associate, Sommesein Nath & Rosenthal LLP
Washington, D.C.

Roshunda L. Price

Roshunda L. Price is a member of the Law School's Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic (LAUC). Prior to joining the clinic staff in 2004, she served as senior counsel with L.R. Sowell & Associates PLLC in Detroit. Her responsibilities included providing a full array of business legal services to corporations, partnerships, and other entities. Price's other experience has included serving as the staff attorney for LAUC; assistant corporation counsel for Wayne County, Michigan; senior attorney, Business Practice, for ANR Pipeline Company in Detroit; and associate attorney, Business and Commercial Practice, with Howard & Howard Attorneys PC in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable John Fekens, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Michigan. Price earned her J.D. at the University of Michigan Law School and a B.B.A. from the U-M Business School. While earning her law degree, Price served as a contributing editor for the Michigan Journal of International Law. Price is also a certified Public Accountant and licensed real estate broker. She is active in the State Bar of Michigan, having served as the chair of the Young Lawyers Section and the American Bar Association where she currently serves as delegate to the House of Delegates.
Richard Primus

Richard Primus is the author of The American Language of Rights, in which he uses tools from the philosophy of language to examine how the concept of rights has changed in response to different political conditions at different times in American history. He has also written on democratic theory, jury decision making, equal protection, and the role of dissent within the American legal system. His teaching interests include constitutional law, the First Amendment, the law of employment discrimination, and the history of legal thought. Primus graduated from Harvard College with an A.B., summa cum laude, in social studies. He then earned a J.D. in politics at Oxford, where he was a Rhodes Scholar and the Joint Senior Scholar at Balliol College. Primus then attended Yale Law School, where his distinctions included the prize for the best oral argument in the Morris Tyler Mock Court of Appeals. After graduating from law school, Primus clerked for Judge Guido Calabresi on the Second Circuit and the U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. He then practiced law at the Washington, D.C., office of Jenner & Block, where his work included voting rights litigation. Primus joined the law faculty in 2001 as an assistant professor.

“...In my asylum and refugee law class, we researched and solved a problem in international refugee law that confused courts, governments, and scholars everywhere. At the end of the term, we participated in a colloquium for days of intense debate with some of the most influential people in the field from almost every continent. Students with a year’s experience in the field were debating international policymakers... And, at the end, we all agreed on a set of principles that have now been cited widely and even endorsed by administrative tribunals. I don’t know where else I could have had that experience so early in my career.”

Michael Kagan, ’00
Clinical Faculty, Refugee Rights Clinic, Tel Aviv University Law School
Israel

Adam C. Pritchard

Adam C. Pritchard teaches corporate and securities law at the Law School. His current research focuses on the effects of fraud on securities markets and the role of class action litigation in controlling fraud. His articles have appeared in the Business Lawyer, Virginia Law Review, Southern California Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and the Journal of France. He holds B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Virginia, as well as an M.P.P. from the Harris School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago. While in Virginia, he was an Olin Fellow in Law and Economics and served as articles development editor on the Virginia Law Review. After graduation, he clerked for Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and served as a Skadden Fellow in the Office of the Solicitor General at the U.S. Department of Justice. After working in private practice, he served as senior counsel in the General Counsel of the SEC. Professor Pritchard has been a visiting professor at the Northwestern University School of Law and the Georgetown University Law Center, and the University of Iowa School of Law. He also has been a visiting scholar at the Securities and Exchange Commission, and a visiting fellow in capital markets studies at the Cato Institute.

Steven R. Ratner

Steven R. Ratner came to the University of Michigan Law School from the University of Texas School of Law, where he was the Albert Sidney Burleson Professor in Law. He teaches and writes in public international law. His research focuses on challenges facing new governments and international institutions after the Cold War, including ethnic conflict, territorial borders, implementation of peace accords, and accountability for human rights violations. Professor Ratner has written and spoken extensively on the law of war and is also interested in the intersection of international law and moral philosophy and other theoretical issues. In 1998, he was appointed by UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan to a three-person Group of Experts to consider options for bringing the Komen Rouge to Justice. A member of the board of editors of the American Journal of International Law, he was a Fulbright Scholar at the Hague in 1998-99, where he worked in and studied the office of the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities. Before he began teaching, he served for six years as attorney-adviser in the Office of the Legal Adviser, U.S. State Department. Ratner holds a J.D. from Yale, an M.A. (diplo) from the Institut Universitaire de Hautes Etudes Internationales (Geneva), and an A.B. from Princeton.

“Michigan was one of those singular experiences for which I am deeply indebted. In four out of five classes my professor wrote the book that was being used in the other law schools in the country. To succeed there was to give you that extreme confidence that you were getting the very best legal education that the United States has to offer.”

Donald Hubert, ’73
Founding Partner, Hubert & Fowler
Chicago, Illinois

Adam C. Pritchard

Donald H. Regan

Donald H. Regan, the William W. Bishop Jr. Collegiate Professor of Law, is also a professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan. He teaches and writes on moral and political philosophy, with a special interest in the theory of the good, constitutional law, and international trade law. He is a member of the Lewisohn Society and the American Philosophical Association for 1979-80. Professor Regan is a graduate of Harvard and the University of Virginia Law School.

He was also a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, where he earned a degree in economics, and he has a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Michigan. Regan began his academic teaching career at Michigan in 1968.

"... and for the Fourth Circuit and served as senior counsel in the Office of the General Counsel at the U.S. Department of Justice. After working in private practice, he served as senior counsel in the General Counsel of the SEC. Professor Pritchard has been a visiting professor at the Northwestern University School of Law and the Georgetown University Law Center, and the University of Iowa School of Law. He also has been a visiting scholar at the Securities and Exchange Commission, and a visiting fellow in capital markets studies at the Cato Institute.

Adam C. Pritchard

Donald H. Regan

Donald H. Regan, the William W. Bishop Jr. Collegiate Professor of Law, is also a professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan. He teaches and writes on moral and political philosophy, with a special interest in the theory of the good, constitutional law, and international trade law. He is a member of the Lewisohn Society and the American Philosophical Association for 1979-80. Professor Regan is a graduate of Harvard and the University of Virginia Law School.
Richard Primus is the author of The American Language of Rights, in which he uses tools from the philosophy of language to examine how the concept of rights has changed in response to different political conditions at different times in American history. He also has written on democratic theory, jury decision making, social protection, and the role of dissent within the American legal system. His teaching interests include constitutional law, the First Amendment, the law of employment discrimination, and the history of legal thought. Primus graduated from Harvard College with an A.B., summa cum laude, in social studies. He then earned a J.D./M.P.H. in politics at Oxford, where he was a Rhodes Scholar and the Robert Senior Scholar at Balliol College. Primus then attended Yale Law School, where his distinctions included the prize for the best oral argument in the Morris Tyler Most Court of Appeals. After graduating from law school, Primus clerked for Judge Guido Calabresi on the Second Circuit and for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. Primus then practiced law at the Washington, D.C., office of Jenner & Block, where his work included voting rights litigation. Primus joined the law faculty in 2001 as an assistant professor.

"In my asylum and refugee law class, we researched and solved a problem in international refugee law that confused courts, governments, and scholars everywhere. At the end of the term, we participated in a colloquium for days of intense debate with some of the most influential people in the field from almost every continent. Students with a year's experience in the field were debating international policymakers. And, at the end of the term, we participated in a colloquium for days of intense debate with some of the most influential people in the field from almost every continent.

Andrew C. Pritchard teaches corporate and securities law at the Law School. His current research focuses on the effects of fraud on securities markets and the role of class action litigation in controlling fraud. His articles have appeared in the Business Lawyer, Virginia Law Review, Southern California Law Review, Stanford Law Review, and the Journal of Finance. He holds B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Virginia, as well as an M.P.P. from the Harris School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago. While at Virginia, he was an Olin Fellow in Law and Economics and served as articles development editor on the Virginia Law Review. After graduation, he clerked for Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III of the Fourth Circuit and served as a Bristow Fellow in the Office of the Solicitor General at the U.S. Department of Justice. After working in private practice, he served as senior counsel in the Office of the General Counsel of the SEC. Professor Pritchard has been a visiting professor at the Northwestern University School of Law and the Georgetown University Law Center. He also has been a visiting scholar at the Securities and Exchange Commission, and a visiting fellow in capital market studies at the Cato Institute.

Richard Primus

Michael Kagan, '00
Clinical Faculty, Refugee Rights Clinic, Tel Aviv University Law School

Adam C. Pritchard

"Michigan was one of those singular experiences for which I am deeply indebted. In four out of five classes my professor wrote the book that was being used in the other law schools in the country. To succeed there was to give you that extreme confidence that you were getting the very best legal education that the United States has to offer." Donald Hubert, '73
Founder, Hubert & Fowler
Chicago, Illinois

Andrew C. Pritchard

Steven R. Ratner
came to the University of Michigan Law School from the University of Texas School of Law, where he was the Albert Sidney Burleson Professor in Law. He teaches and writes in public international law. His research focuses on challenges facing new governments and international institutions after the Cold War including ethnic conflict, territorial borders, implementation of peace accords, and accountability for human rights violations. Professor Ratner has written and spoken extensively on the law of war and is also interested in the interaction of international law and moral philosophy and other theoretical issues. In 1998, he was appointed by UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan to a three-person Group of Experts to consider options for bringing the Khmer Rouge to Justice. A member of the board of editors of the American Journal of International Law, he was a Fulbright Scholar at The Hague in 1998-99 where he worked in and studied the office of the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities. Before he began teaching, he served for six years as a law-and-order adviser in the Office of the Legal Advisor U.S. State Department. Ratner holds a J.D. from Yale, an M.A. (diplôme) from the Institut Universitaire de Hautes Etudes Internationales (Geneva), and an A.B. from Princeton.

Steven R. Ratner

Donald H. Regan, the William W. Boyd Jr. Collegiate Professor of Law, is also a professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan. He teaches and writes on moral and political philosophy, with a special interest in the theory of the good, constitutional law concentrating on federalism issues and international trade law, particularly core issues such as the national treatment obligation and Article XX of the GATT. A member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Professor Regan speaks internationally on both international trade law and philosophy issues. His book, Utilitarianism and Co-operation, shared the Franklin J. Maitchette Prize of the American Philosophical Association for 1979-80. Professor Regan is a graduate of Harvard and the University of Virginia Law School.

Donald H. Regan

He was also a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, where he earned a degree in economics, and he has a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Michigan. Regan began his academic teaching career at Michigan in 1968.

Donald H. Regan
Paul D. Reingold

Paul D. Reingold is a clinical professor of law and director of the Michigan Clinical Law Program’s Civil Litigation Clinic. Prior to joining the faculty in 1983, Reingold served as a legal services attorney, specializing in cases against the state and federal governments. His primary interests include civil rights litigation, appellate practice, prisoners’ rights, and civil procedure. He teaches trial advocacy, litigation ethics, negotiation, and clinical law, and is a past recipient of the L. Hart Wright teaching award. He has also taught as a visiting professor of law in Japan and in Spain, and as a visiting clinical professor at the Boston College Law School. He has served on the board of directors of the Clinical Law Section of the American Association of Law Schools, and he was a founding member of the editorial board of the Clinical Law Review. On his most recent sabbatical Professor Reingold attended Gerry Spencer’s Trial Lawyers College in Wyoming. He has chaired and is currently a member of the executive committee of Michigan’s Institute of Continuing Legal Education and he has trained to become a court-approved mediator for alternative dispute resolution. Professor Reingold earned his B.A. at Amherst College and his J.D. at Boston University Law School.

Nicholas J. Rine

Nicholas J. Rine was a trial lawyer in private practice and tried cases in a wide variety of state and federal courts and agencies before joining the faculty in 1989. At U-M he has taught in the General Civil Clinic, the Child Advocacy Clinic, the Legal Assistance for Urban Communities Clinic, the Asylum and Refugee Law Clinic, and the Women and the Law Clinic, and has taught ethics, negotiation, and a new course on Law and Development which ties in to students working in internships in developing nations. He directs the Law School’s Cambodian Law and Development Program in which Michigan students, from the Law School and from other graduate programs in the University, work in internships in Cambodia with NGOs and government ministries. He has worked in Cambodia frequently as a consultant for human rights NGOs, and has taught at the Royal University of Law and Economics and the Community Legal Education Center in Phnom Penh on a Fulbright grant. While there in 2000, he published a legal ethics textbook in English and Khmer. He received B.A. and J.D. degrees from Wayne State University. During 1985–1986, he served as president of the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association.

David A. Santacroce

David A. Santacroce is a clinical assistant professor with the Michigan Clinical Law Program teaching in the General Civil Clinic. His work in the clinic has focused on prisoners’ civil rights, particularly healthcare issues. Professor Santacroce is the former senior staff attorney for the Sugar Law Center for Economic and Social Justice in Detroit. While there he managed a programmatic worker’s rights campaign under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act in trial and appellate courts throughout the United States. Santacroce is a founding member, director, officer of, and general counsel to Equal Justice America, a national, nonprofit corporation that provides grants to law students who volunteer to work with organizations providing civil legal services to the indigent. He received an L.L.M. from Columbia University School of Law, where he was named a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar; a J.D., cum laude, from Pace University School of Law, where he was managing editor of the Pace Law Review; and a B.A. from Connecticut College.

For over 30 years the Law School has offered clinical programs that focus on the development of expertise in client counseling, discovery, negotiation and mediation, legal writing, and trial skills. Our clinics allow students to assume the role of practicing attorneys, representing real clients in matters of great significance to the clients’ lives.

Carl E. Schneider

Carl E. Schneider holds the Chauncey Stillman Professorship for Ethics, Morality, and the Practice of Law and is Professor of Internal Medicine. He is a bioethicist who recently published (with Marsha Garrison) a casebook titled The Law of Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation. He is the author of The Practice of Autonomy: Patents, Doctors, and Medical Decisions, which examines how power to make medical decisions is and should be divided between doctors and patients and which analyzes the role of autonomy in American culture. Professor Schneider is continuing his study of the sociology, psychology, and law of decisions by investigating how people choose to enter a profession and build professional careers. For that investigation (to be published as At the Threshold: The Professional Choices of Young Lawyers) he is currently interviewing a sample of 1998 graduates of the Michigan Law School. In addition, he is preparing a book arguing that the empirical literature demonstrates that the policy of promoting the use of living wills in end-of-life decisions has failed and can only fail. Professor Schneider has also written influentially about family law and published (with Margaret Brinig) a casebook — An Invitation to Family Law.

David A. Santacroce

Nicholas J. Rine

David A. Santacroce is a clinical assistant professor with the Michigan Clinical Law Program teaching in the General Civil Clinic. His work in the clinic has focused on prisoners’ civil rights, particularly healthcare issues. Professor Santacroce is the former senior staff attorney for the Sugar Law Center for Economic and Social Justice in Detroit. While there he managed a programmatic worker’s rights campaign under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act in trial and appellate courts throughout the United States. Santacroce is a founding member, director, officer of, and general counsel to Equal Justice America, a national, nonprofit corporation that provides grants to law students who volunteer to work with organizations providing civil legal services to the indigent. He received an L.L.M. from Columbia University School of Law, where he was named a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar; a J.D., cum laude, from Pace University School of Law, where he was managing editor of the Pace Law Review; and a B.A. from Connecticut College.

For over 30 years the Law School has offered clinical programs that focus on the development of expertise in client counseling, discovery, negotiation and mediation, legal writing, and trial skills. Our clinics allow students to assume the role of practicing attorneys, representing real clients in matters of great significance to the clients’ lives.

Carl E. Schneider

Carl E. Schneider holds the Chauncey Stillman Professorship for Ethics, Morality, and the Practice of Law and is Professor of Internal Medicine. He is a bioethicist who recently published (with Marsha Garrison) a casebook titled The Law of Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation. He is the author of The Practice of Autonomy: Patents, Doctors, and Medical Decisions, which examines how power to make medical decisions is and should be divided between doctors and patients and which analyzes the role of autonomy in American culture. Professor Schneider is continuing his study of the sociology, psychology, and law of decisions by investigating how people choose to enter a profession and build professional careers. For that investigation (to be published as At the Threshold: The Professional Choices of Young Lawyers) he is currently interviewing a sample of 1998 graduates of the Michigan Law School. In addition, he is preparing a book arguing that the empirical literature demonstrates that the policy of promoting the use of living wills in end-of-life decisions has failed and can only fail. Professor Schneider has also written influentially about family law and published (with Margaret Brinig) a casebook — An Invitation to Family Law.
For over 30 years the Law School has offered clinical programs that focus on the development of expertise in client counseling, discovery, negotiation, mediation, legal writing, and trial skills. Our clinics allow students to assume the role of practicing attorneys, representing real clients in matters of great significance to the clients' lives.
Anne N. Schroth, a clinical assistant professor of law, was a staff attorney with AYUDA in Washington, D.C., representing immigrant and refugee victims of domestic violence prior to coming to the Law School in 1997. She developed the Poverty Law Clinic, and joined the Michigan Clinical Law Program faculty in 1998. Professor Schroth is the principle faculty liaison to the Michigan Poverty Law Program. Michigan's legal services state-supported office that is jointly operated by the Law School and Legal Services of South Central Michigan, Schroth has most recently developed a new clinical course, the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic, in which students will work in a medical/legal collaboration with pediatric health-care providers to develop interdisciplinary strategies to improve health outcomes for low-income children. She earned her B.A. at the University of Chicago, Phi Beta Kappa. Schroth served as a student attorney and executive director of the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau while earning her J.D. at Harvard Law School, cum laude. She then clerked for the Hon. Mary Johnson Lowe of the U.S. District Court of the Southern District of New York and practiced as an associate with Bernabei & Katz in Washington, D.C.

Rebecca J. Scott is the Charles Gibson Distinguished University Professor of History and Professor of Law at the University of Michigan and a specialist on the history of slavery, emancipation, and citizenship in plantation societies. She received an A.B. from Radcliffe College, an M.Phil in economic history from the London School of Economics, and a Ph.D. from Princeton University. With Michael Zeuke she has recently written "The Right to Have Rights: The Claims-Making of Former Slaves in Cuba," Amores (Paris) (Summer 2004) and "Property in Writing: Property on the Ground: Pigs, Horses, Land and Citizenship in the Aftermath of Slavery, Cuba, 1880-1909." Comparative Studies in Society and History 44 (October 2003). She is co-author with Frederick Cooper and Thomas Holt, of Beyond Slavery: Explorations of Race, Labor, and Citizenship. Her book, Degrees of Freedom: Society after Slavery in Louisiana and Cuba, is forthcoming in fall 2005. In 2002 Professor Scott was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and in 2004 she received a Guggenheim fellowship.

Anne N. Schroth

A.W. Brian Simpson’s primary interest is in the historical development of law and legal institutions. He is an expert on the European Convention and on human rights and frequently speaks on these subjects in Europe and the United States. Simpson is the Charles F. and Edith J. Clyne Professor of Law at the Law School and has held professorships at the University of Kent, the University of Chicago, and the University of Ghana. Professor Simpson earned an M.A. and a Doctorate of Civil Law from Oxford University. He is a fellow (honorary) of Lincoln College, Oxford, and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the British Academy. In June 2001, he became Honorary Queen’s Counsel. Simpson teaches Property, English Legal History and The Boundaries of the Market at the Law School. His books include Human Rights and the End of Empire, Brian and the Genesis of the European Convention: A History of the Common Law of Contract, A Biographical Dictionary of the Common Law: Common and the Common Law: A History of the Pre-Law, Low, Legal Theory and Legal History: In the Highest Degree Odious: Detention Without Trial in Wartime Britain and Leading Cases in the Common Law.

A.W. Brian Simpson

Philip Soper; the James V. Campbell Professor of Law, began his academic career at Michigan in 1973 where he teaches courses in contracts and legal and moral philosophy. He is the author of A Theory of Law and The Ethics of Defense, as well as numerous articles in legal and moral philosophy. Professor Soper graduated summa cum laude from Washington University in St. Louis in 1964 and later received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy from the same institution. He received his J.D. degree, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1969, where he was Supreme Court and note editor on the Harvard Law Review. The following year he served as law clerk to Justice Byron R. White of the Supreme Court of the United States. Following the clerkship, he spent a year studying philosophy at Oxford University, and then practiced two years in the General Counsel’s Office at the Council on Environmental Quality in Washington, D.C.

Rebecca J. Scott

Philip Soper
state-supported office that is jointly operated by the Law School and Legal Services of South Central Michigan. Schroth has most recently developed a new clinical course, the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic, in which students will work in a medical/legal collaboration with pediatric health-care providers to develop interdisciplinary strategies to improve health outcomes for low-income children. She earned her B.A. at the University of Chicago, Phi Beta Kappa. Schroth served as a student attorney and executive director of the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau while earning her J.D. at Harvard Law School, cum laude. She then clerked for the Hon. Mary Johnson Love of the U.S. District Court of the Southern District of New York and practiced as an associate with Bernstein & Katzenstein in Washington, D.C.

Anne N. Schroth

Anne N. Schroth, a clinical assistant professor of law, was a staff attorney with AYUDA in Washington, D.C., representing immigrant and refugee victims of domestic violence prior to coming to the Law School in 1997. She developed the Poverty Law Clinic, and joined the Michigan Clinical Law Program faculty in 1998. Professor Schroth is the principle faculty liaison to the Michigan Poverty Law Program; Michigan’s legal services for low-income clients. The skills I learned in the General Litigation Clinic have been invaluable in my practice as a deputy public defender. Most Public Defender offices do not have the resources to train attorneys from scratch, and it is difficult to build these skills while managing a busy caseload. For these reasons, the clinics are crucial for new attorneys starting out in criminal law.”

Rabyn Enos, '97
Attorney at Law, Office of the Public Defender
County of Santa Cruz, California

A.W. Brian Simpson

A.W. Brian Simpson’s primary interest is in the historical development of law and legal institutions. He is an expert on the European Convention and on human rights and frequently speaks on these subjects in Europe and the United States. Simpson is the Charles F. and Edith J. Clyne Professor of Law at the Law School and has held professorships at the University of Kent, the University of Chicago, and the University of Ghana. Professor Simpson earned an M.A. and a Doctorate of Civil Law from Oxford University. He is a fellow (honorary) of Lincoln College, Oxford, and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the British Academy. In June 2001, he became Honorary Queen’s Counsel. Simpson teaches Property, English Legal History and The Boundaries of the Market at the Law School. His books include Human Rights and the End of Empire; Brian and the Genesis of the European Convention; A History of the Common Law of Contract; A Biographical Dictionary of the Common Law; Cannibalism and the Criminal Law: A History of the Land, Law, Legal Theory and Legal History; and The Ethics of Low. He is an expert on the United States. Simpson is the principle faculty liaison to the Michigan Poverty Law Program; Michigan’s legal services for low-income clients.

Rebecca J. Scott

Rebecca J. Scott is the Charles Gibson Distinguished University Professor of History and Professor of Law at the University of Michigan and a specialist on the history of slavery, emancipation, and citizenship in plantation societies. She received an A.B. from Radcliffe College, an M.A., and Ph.D. in economic history from the London School of Economics, and a Ph.D. from Princeton University. With Michael Zeuke she has recently written "The Right to Have Rights: The Claims-Making of Former Slaves in Cuba," Anales (Paris) (Summer 2004) and "Property in Writing, Property on the Ground: Pigs, Horses, Land and Citizenship in the Aftermath of Slavery, Cuba, 1880–1909." Comparative Studies in Society and History 44 (October 2002). She is co-author, with Frederick Cooper and Thomas Holt, of Beyond Slavery: Explorations of Race, Labor, and Citizenship in Post-emancipation Societies. Her book, Degrees of Freedom: Society after Slavery in Louisiana and Cuba, is forthcoming in fall 2005. In 2002 Professor Scott was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and in 2004 she received a Guggenheim fellowship.

Philip Soper

Philip Soper, the James V. Campbell Professor of Law, began his academic career at Michigan in 1973 where he teaches courses in contracts and legal and moral philosophy. He is the author of A Theory of Law and The Ethics of Defiance, as well as numerous articles in legal and moral philosophy. Professor Soper graduated summa cum laude from Washington University in St. Louis in 1964 and later received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy from the same institution. He received his J.D. degree, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1969, where he was Supreme Court and note editor on the Harvard Law Review. The following year he served as law clerk to Justice Byron R. White of the Supreme Court of the United States. Following the clerkship, he spent a year studying philosophy at Oxford University, and then practiced two years in the General Counsel’s Office at the Council on Environmental Quality in Washington, D.C.
Kimberly Thomas

Kimberly Thomas joined the faculty at the Law School in 2003 as a clinical assistant professor. She is a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Maryland and Harvard Law School, where she was editor in chief of the Civil Rights-Civil Liberties Law Review. Thomas clerked for Judge R. Guy Cole at the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and served as a major trials attorney with the Defender Association of Philadelphia prior to joining the faculty. During law school she worked for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, and spent time with Legal Aid of Cambodia and the Justice Committee of Parliament in Cape Town, South Africa. In addition to practicing law, she has worked as a newspaper reporter, a high school math teacher, and taught an undergraduate seminar in the economics department while she was at Harvard. Thomas' research, teaching, and practice concentrates on criminal law, especially on indigent persons accused of crimes and prisoner re-entry into the community. Thomas teaches in the General Civil Criminal Clinic and, in winter 2005, will teach criminal law.

"My work as a student with the University of Michigan Law School clinical programs illustrated for me the strengths and the limitations of the law to impact social systems and the lives of ordinary people. Through expert guidance by clinical faculty and direct experience I learned to analyze problems, communicate persuasively, negotiate settlement agreements, and prepare and present a case at trial. Further, my clinical experiences established in me a measure of self-confidence that I did not previously possess."

Anastasia L. Urtz,'93
Dean of Students
Syracuse University

Grace C. Tonner is a clinical professor of law and director of the Law School's Legal Practice Program. She earned a B.A. magna cum laude, in political science at California State University at Long Beach, and then went on to earn her J.D., cum laude, at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles. Her emphasis in law school was commercial law and she backed up her interests with honors and activities to broaden her understanding. Among her awards were the American Jurisprudence Award in Secured Transactions in Real Property and the Bemo Brink Bankruptcy Award. She also served a judicial externship with the Hon. Robert L. Ordin, Bankruptcy Judge, and participated in the Small Business Administration Clinical Program. Tonner's previous experience has included serving as an assistant professor and adjunct professor at Loyola Law School, directing their legal writing program, and teaching Commercial Law, Sales, Contracts, and Insurance coverage. She also was a partner in Tonner & Matera law firm specializing in insurance coverage. Tonner currently serves on the editorial board for The Journal of the Legal Writing Institute and the academic board for the Burton Awards for Legal Achievement.

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling joined the Law School faculty in 2003 as an assistant professor after serving as a research fellow at Stanford Law School's Center for Internet and Society, and as president of Creative Commons, a nonprofit that facilitates sharing of intellectual property. Van Houweling has also served as senior adviser to the president and Board of Directors of the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers, the company that oversees the Internet Domain Name System, and as a research fellow at the Berkman Center for Internet & Society at Harvard Law School. Van Houweling received a B.A. in political science from the University of Michigan and a J.D. from Harvard Law School. She clerked for Judge Michael Boudin of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States. Van Houweling's teaching and research interests include intellectual property, technology, property, and constitutional law.

"In my five years of private practice after graduating from the Law School, I had the privilege of representing eleven refugees in the asylum process pro bono. My level of commitment to public service work is the direct result of the General Clinic and is now reflected in my current position. The Clinic was a demanding and time-consuming class. But at the end of the semester, I felt as though all of the work had been more than worth it."

Charles Duross,'96
Assistant U.S. Attorney, United States Attorney's Office
Southern District of Florida

Joseph Vining, the Harry Burns Hutchins Professor of Law, practiced in Washington, D.C., and has served with the Department of Justice and with the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice. In 1983 he was a Senior Fellow of the National Endowment for the Humanities and in 1997 a Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Fellow. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has lectured and written in the fields of legal philosophy, administrative law, corporate law, comparative law, and criminal law, and is the author of Legal Sovereignty, a book on the nature of the person recognized and constituted by law. The Authoritative and the Authoritarian, on the nature of the person speaking for law and the relation between institutional structure and the real presence of authority; From Newton's Sleep, on the legal form of thought and its general implications; and Song Sparrow and the Chilk: on the world that makes law possible. Vining is a graduate of Yale University and Harvard Law School and holds a degree in history from Cambridge University.
Kimberly Thomas

Kimberly Thomas joined the faculty of the Law School in 2003 as a clinical assistant professor. She is a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Maryland and Harvard Law School, where she was editor in chief of the Civil Rights/Civil Liberties Law Review. Thomas clerked for Judge R. Guy Cole at the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and served as a major trials attorney with the Defender Association of Philadelphia prior to joining the faculty. During law school she worked for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, and spent time with Legal Aid of Cambodia and the Justice Committee of Parliament in Cape Town, South Africa. In addition to practicing law, she has worked as a newspaper reporter, a high school math teacher, and taught an undergraduate seminar in the economics department while she was at Harvard.

Thomas learned to analyze problems, communicate persuasively, negotiate settlement agreements, and prepare and present a case at trial. Further, my clinical experiences established in me a measure of self-confidence that I did not previously possess.

Anastasia L. Urtz, '93
Dean of Students
Syracuse University

Grace C. Tonner is a clinical professor of law and director of the Law School's Legal Practice Program. She earned a B.A., magna cum laude, in political science at California State University at Long Beach, and then went on to earn her J.D., cum laude, at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles. Her emphasis in law school was commercial law and she backed up her interests with honors and activities to broaden her understanding. Among her awards were the American Jurisprudence Award in Secured Transactions in Real Property and the Bemo Brink Bankruptcy Award. She also served a judicial externship with the Hon. Robert L. Ordin, Bankruptcy Judge, and participated in the Small Business Administration Clinical Program. Tonner's previous experience has included serving as an assistant professor and adjunct professor at Loyola Law School, directing their legal writing program, and teaching Commercial Law, Sales, Contracts, and Insurance coverage. She also was a partner in Tonner & Maltese law firm specializing in insurance coverage. Tonner currently serves on the editorial board for The Journal of the Legal Writing Institute and the academic board for the Burton Awards for Legal Achievement.

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling joined the Law School faculty in 2002 as an assistant professor after serving as a research fellow at Stanford Law School's Center for Internet and Society, and as a research fellow at the Berkman Center for Internet & Society at Harvard Law School. Van Houweling received a B.A. in political science from the University of Michigan and a J.D. from Harvard Law School. She clerked for Judge Michael Boudin of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Van Houweling's teaching and research interests include intellectual property law and technology policy, constitutional law, and authorship and knowledge management.

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling

"In my five years of private practice after graduating from the Law School, I had the privilege of representing eleven refugees in the asylum process pro bono. My level of commitment to public service work is the direct result of the General Clinic and is now reflected in my current position. The Clinic was a demanding and time-consuming class. But at the end of the semester, I felt as though all of the work had been more than worth it."

Charles Duruss, '96
Assistant U.S. Attorney, United States Attorney's Office
Southern District of Florida

Joseph Vining, the Harry Burns Hutchins Professor of Law, practiced in Washington, D.C., and has served with the Department of Justice and with the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice. In 1983 he was a Senior Fellow of the National Endowment for the Humanities and in 1997 a Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Fellow. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has lectured and written in the fields of legal philosophy, administrative law, corporate law, comparative law, and criminal law and is the author of Legal Identity: a book on the nature of the person recognized and constituted by law. The Authoritarian and the Authoritarian, on the nature of the person speaking for law and the relation between institutional structure and the real presence of authority. From Newton's Sleep, on the legal form of thought and its general implications; and Song Sparrow and the Chilk, on the world that makes law possible.

Vining is a graduate of Yale University and Harvard Law School and holds a degree in history from Cambridge University.

Molly Shaffer Van Houweling

"In my five years of private practice after graduating from the Law School, I had the privilege of representing eleven refugees in the asylum process pro bono. My level of commitment to public service work is the direct result of the General Clinic and is now reflected in my current position. The Clinic was a demanding and time-consuming class. But at the end of the semester, I felt as though all of the work had been more than worth it."

Charles Duruss, '96
Assistant U.S. Attorney, United States Attorney's Office
Southern District of Florida

Joseph Vining, the Harry Burns Hutchins Professor of Law, practiced in Washington, D.C., and has served with the Department of Justice and with the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice. In 1983 he was a Senior Fellow of the National Endowment for the Humanities and in 1997 a Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Fellow. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has lectured and written in the fields of legal philosophy, administrative law, corporate law, comparative law, and criminal law and is the author of Legal Identity: a book on the nature of the person recognized and constituted by law. The Authoritarian and the Authoritarian, on the nature of the person speaking for law and the relation between institutional structure and the real presence of authority. From Newton's Sleep, on the legal form of thought and its general implications; and Song Sparrow and the Chilk, on the world that makes law possible.

Vining is a graduate of Yale University and Harvard Law School and holds a degree in history from Cambridge University.
Lawrence W. Waggoner

Lawrence W. Waggoner is the Lewis M. Simes Professor of Law at Michigan. He has been active in law reform in the field of wills, trusts, and future interests. As the director of research and chief reporter for the joint editorial board for Uniform Trust and Estate Acts, he was the principal drafter of the Uniform Probate Code revisions completed in the 1990s. He currently serves as reporter for the Restatement (Third) of Property (Wills and Other Donative Transfers), a project that is ongoing. Volume I of the new Restatement was published in 1999, and volume 2 was published in 2003. He is also the coauthor of a casebook and several articles in these fields. He graduated from the University of Cincinnati and the University of Michigan Law School. As a Fulbright Scholar, he earned a doctor of philosophy degree from Oxford University. He later practiced law with Swaine, Swaine & Moore in New York City, and he served as a captain in the U.S. Army from 1966 to 1968. Professor Waggoner came to Michigan from the University of Virginia in 1974.

Peter K. Westen

Peter K. Westen's principal scholarly interests are in the fields of criminal law and legal theory, and he is the author of The Logic of Consent: The Diversity and Discreteness of Consent as a Defense to Criminal Conduct, and Speaking of Equality: The Rhetoric of "Equality" in Moral and Legal Discourse. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, Professor Westen served as law clerk to Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court of the United States; was a fellow of the International Legal Center in Bogota, Colombia, where he advised the Colombian Ministry of Economic Development on commercial code reform; and, when he returned to the United States, he became an associate in the Washington, D.C., office of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison and appeared as counsel in several cases in the U.S. Supreme Court. Westen earned his B.A. from Harvard College in 1964. He spent the following year in Vienna on an Austrian State Scholarship studying contemporary Austrian political history and then earned his J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, where he was editor in chief of the California Law Review. He joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1973 and was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1981. He is now the Frank C. Miller Professor of Law.

The University of Michigan Law School faculty is passionate about helping their students learn the law both inside and outside the classroom.

Mark D. West

Mark D. West, the Nippon Life Professor of Law, is the director of both the Japanese Legal Studies Program and the Center for International and Comparative Law at the Law School. While in practice with the New York law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, West spent a year in Tokyo conducting an investigation for Sumitomo Corporation, whose chief copper trader created the largest individual trading loss in history through unauthorized trading. He earned his B.A., magni cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Rhodes College, and his J.D. with multiple honors from Columbia University School of Law, where he was notes and comments editor for the Columbia Law Review. He clerked for the Hon. Eugene H. Nickerson of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York. He has studied and taught at the University of Tokyo and Kyoto University, and has been a Fulbright Research Scholar at the University of Berlin, and a fellow of the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science. His current research focuses on two issues: the role of law in everyday life in Japan, and comparative "scandalology." Since 2003, he has served as director of the University of Michigan Center for Japanese Studies.

James Boyd White

James Boyd White, the L. Hart Wright Collegiate Professor of Law, is also a professor of English, adjunct professor of classical studies, and chair of the Michigan Society of Fellows. He is a graduate of Amherst College, Harvard Law School, and Harvard Graduate School. After graduation from law school he spent a year as a Sheldon Fellow in Europe and then practiced law in Boston for two years. He has previously taught at the University of Colorado and the University of Chicago. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Law Institute. He has received fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities, and in 1997-98 was a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar. White has published numerous books: The Legal Imagination; Constitutional Criminal Procedure (with Scarboro); When Words Lose Their Meaning: Herodes' Bow: Essays in the Rhetoric and Ethics of the Law; Justice as Translator; "The Book of Stomps"; Learning to Read George Herbert; Acts of Hope: The Creation of Authority in Literature, Law and Politics; and Expectation to Experience: Essays on Law and Legal Education; and most recently The Edge of Meaning.
Lawrence W. Waggoner

Lawrence W. Waggoner is the Lewis M. Simons Professor of Law at Michigan. He has been active in law reform in the field of wills, trusts, and future interests. As the director of research and chief reporter for the joint editorial board for Uniform Trust and Estate Acts, he was the principal drafter of the Uniform Probate Code revisions completed in the 1990s. He currently serves as reporter for the Restatement (Third) of Property (Wills and Other Donative Transfers), a project that is ongoing. Volume 1 of the new Restatement was published in 1999, and volume 2 was published in 2003. He is also the coauthor of a casebook and several articles in these fields. He graduated from the University of Cincinnati and the University of Michigan Law School. As a Fulbright Scholar, he earned a doctor of philosophy degree from Oxford University. He later practiced law with Cravath, Swaine & Moore in New York City and he served as a captain in the U.S. Army from 1966 to 1968. Professor Waggoner came to Michigan from the University of Virginia in 1974.

Peter K. Westen

Peter K. Westen's principal scholarly interests are in the fields of criminal law and legal theory, and he is the author of The Logic of Consent: The Diversity and Deceptiveness of Consent as a Defense to Criminal Conduct, and Speaking of Equality: The Rhetoric of 'Equality' in Marx and Legal Discourse. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, Professor Westen served as law clerk to Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court of the United States; was a fellow of the International Legal Center in Bogota, Colombia, where he advised the Colombian Ministry of Economic Development on commercial code reform and, when he returned to the United States, he became an associate in the Washington, D.C., office of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison and appeared as counsel in several cases in the U.S. Supreme Court. Westen earned his B.A. from Harvard College in 1964. He spent the following year in Vienna on an Austrian State Scholarship studying contemporary Austrian political history and then earned his J.D. from the University of California Berkeley, where he was editor in chief of the California Law Review. He joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1973 and was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1981. He is now the Frank C. Millard Professor of Law.

Mark D. West

Mark D. West, the Nippon Life Professor of Law, is the director of both the Japanese Legal Studies Program and the Center for International and Comparative Law at the Law School. While in practice with the New York law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, West spent a year in Tokyo conducting an investigation for Sumitomo Corporation, whose chief copper trader created the largest individual trading loss in history through unauthorized trading. He earned his B.A., magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Rhodes College, and his J.D. with multiple honors from Columbia University School of Law, where he was notes and comments editor for the Columbia Law Review. He clerked for the Hon. Eugene H. Nickerson of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York. He has studied and taught at the University of Tokyo and Kyoto University, and has been a Fulbright Research Scholar in Austria, a fellow of the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science. His current research focuses on two issues: the role of law in everyday life in Japan, and comparative "scandalology." Since 2003, he has served as director of the University of Michigan Center for Japanese Studies.

James Boyd White

James Boyd White, the L. H. Wright Collegiate Professor of Law, is also a professor of English, an adjunct professor of classical studies, and chair of the Michigan Society of Fellows. He is a graduate of Amherst College, Harvard Law School, and Harvard Graduate School. After graduation from law school he spent a year as a Sheldon Fellow in Europe and the practiced law in Boston for two years. He has previously taught at the University of Colorado and the University of Chicago. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Law Institute. He has received fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities, and in 1997-98 was a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar. White has published numerous books: The Legal Imagination; Constitutional Criminal Procedure (with Scarborough); When Words Lose Their Meaning; Heracles' Bow: Essays in the Rhetoric and Politics of the Law; Justice as Translated; "This Book of Stories"; Learning to Read George Herbert; Acts of Hope; The Creation of Authority in Literature, Law and Politics; From Expectation to Experience: Essays on Law and Legal Education; and most recently The Edge of Meaning.
James J. White

James J. White has written on many aspects of commercial law and has published the most widely recognized treatise Uniform Commercial Code (with Summers). He is also the author of several casebooks on commercial, bankruptcy, and banking law. Professor White practiced privately in Los Angeles before beginning his academic career at the University of Michigan in 1964. He currently serves as the Robert A. Sullivan Professor of Law. Professor White has served as the reporter for the Revision of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code. He is a member of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and has served on several American Law Institute and NCLC/US committees dealing with Uniform Commercial Code. He received the L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching for 2001–02 and the Homer Kipke Achievement Award given by the American College of Commercial Finance Lawyers. Professor White earned his B.A., magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Amherst College and his J.D., Order of the Coif, from the University of Michigan Law School.

“I have found the faculty at the Law School to be tremendously interested in the students. I spent several hours discussing a research project with one professor who then followed up with me after our conversation with additional suggestions. This was particularly generous, because I was not a student in any of his classes."

Madeleine Findley, ’04
Judicial Clerk to Judge David Coar
U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois
Chicago, Illinois

Christina B. Whitman

Christina B. Whitman, a former editor in chief of the Michigan Law Review, holds three degrees from the University of Michigan, including a law degree and a graduate degree in Chinese literature. She joined the Michigan law faculty in 1974, after serving as law clerk to Judge Harold Lefenthal of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and to Justice Lewis Powell of the Supreme Court of the United States. Her research interests include federal courts, constitutional litigation, torts, and feminist jurisprudence. Whitman is also professor of Women’s Studies at the University and serves on the Executive Committee of the Institute for Research on Women and Gender. She is interested in questions of responsibility and justice, particularly as they arise in cultural conflicts, and in the use of legal language to conceal and reveal responsibility. Whitman served as associate dean for academic affairs for the Law School from 1997–2001 and in November 2001, she was named the Francis A. Allen Collegiate Professor of Law.

Christina Chinkin

Christina Chinkin is Professor of International Law at the London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London. She is an internationally respected scholar of public international law, alternative dispute resolution, international criminal law, human rights, especially women’s human rights, and the intersection of feminist jurisprudence and international law. Chinkin received an L.L.B. with honors from the University of London in 1971; an L.L.M. from the University of London in 1972; a second L.L.M. from Yale University in 1981; and a Ph.D. from the University of Sydney in 1990. Formerly dean of the law faculty at the University of Southampton and a member of the law faculty at the University of Sydney, she has served as a senior or guest lecturer on international law and international human rights at such universities as the National University of Singapore, Hong Kong University Law School, the International Law Institute of China, and the European University Institute. She is the author of Third Parties in International Law (OUP, 1993); coauthor of Dispute Resolution in Australia (Butterworths, 2nd edition 2002); and coauthor of The Boundaries of International Law: A Feminist Analysis (MLR, 2000). The last was awarded the Certificate of Merit of the American Society of International Law. She is also a member of the editorial board of the American Journal of International Law.

“As you listen to skilled attorneys and work with judges, you realize the kind of sophisticated, complex understanding they have of what the law means and how it informs so many facets of society. They believe that, they express it, and their work is better for it. At Michigan, I had the opportunity to learn from and work with a faculty who was committed to helping students appreciate that kind of complexity.”

Abigail V. Carter, ’00
Associate, Bredhoff & Kaiser
Washington, D.C.

J. Christopher McCrudden

J. Christopher McCrudden teaches in the areas of international economic law, comparative human rights, and comparative and international economic law and labor rights. He is currently writing a book entitled: Buying Social Justice about the relationship between public procurement and equality. He is Fellow and Tutor in Law at Lincoln College, Oxford. Professor of Human Rights Law in the University of Oxford; a non-practicing Barrister-at-Law (Gray’s Inn); and an Overseas Affiliated Professor of Law at the University of Michigan Law School. McCrudden holds an L.L.B. from Queen’s University, Belfast, an L.L.M. from Yale, and a D. Phil. from Oxford. He specializes in human rights (international, European, and comparative), and currently concentrates on issues of equality and discrimination, and the relationship between international economic law and human rights. He is a member of editorial boards of several journals, including European Public Law, the Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, the International Journal of Discrimination and the Law, and the Journal of International Economic Law. McCrudden is also the co-editor of the Law in Context series, and he serves as the Economic Commission’s Expert Network on the Application of the Gender Equality Directives, and is a scientific director of the European Commission’s network of experts on non-discrimination. He is also a member of the Procurement Board for Northern Ireland.
James J. White

James J. White has written on many aspects of commercial law and has published the most widely recognized treatise Uniform Commercial Code (with Summers). He is also the author of several casebooks on commercial, bankruptcy, and banking law. Professor White practiced privately in Los Angeles before beginning his academic career at the University of Michigan in 1964. He currently serves as the Robert A. Sullivan Professor of Law. Professor White has served as the reporter for the Revision of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code. He is a member of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and has served on several American Law Institute and NCCUSL committees dealing with revision of the Uniform Commercial Code.

"I have found the faculty at the Law School to be tremendously interested in the students. I spent several hours discussing a research project with one professor who then followed up with me after our conversation with additional suggestions. This was particularly generous, because I was not a student in any of his classes."

Madeleine Findlay, '04
Judicial Clerk to Judge David Coar
U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois
Chicago, Illinois

Christina B. Whitman

Christina B. Whitman, a former editor in chief of the Michigan Law Review, holds a law degree and a graduate degree in Chinese literature. She joined the Michigan law faculty in 1976, after serving as law clerk to Judge Harold Leventhal of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and to Justice Lewis Powell of the Supreme Court of the United States. Her research interests include federal courts, constitutional litigation, torts, and feminist jurisprudence. Whitman is also a professor of Women's Studies at the University and serves on the Executive Committee of the Institute for Research on Women and Gender. She is interested in questions of responsibility and justice, particularly as they arise in cultural conflicts, and in the use of legal language to conceal and reveal responsibility.

"As you listen to skilled attorneys and work with judges, you realize the kind of sophisticated, complex understanding they have of what the law means and how it informs so many facets of society. They believe that, they express it, and their work is better for it. At Michigan, I had the opportunity to learn from and work with a faculty that was committed to helping students appreciate that kind of complexity."

Abigail V. Carter, '00
Associate, Bredhoff & Kaiser
Washington, D.C.

Christine Chinkin

Christine Chinkin is Professor of International Law at the London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London. She is an internationally respected scholar of public international law, alternative dispute resolutions, international criminal law, human rights, especially women's human rights, and the intersection of feminist jurisprudence and international law. Chinkin received a LLB. with honors from the University of London in 1971; an LLM. from the University of London in 1972; a second LLM. from Yale University in 1981; and a Ph.D. from the University of Sydney in 1990. Formerly dean of the law faculty at the University of Southampton and a member of the law faculty at the University of Sydney, she has served as a senior or guest lecturer on international law and international human rights at such universities as the National University of Singapore, Hong Kong University Law School, the International Law Institute of China, and the European University Institute. She is the author of Third Parties in International Law (OUP, 1993); coauthor of Dispute Resolution in Australia (Butterworths, 2nd edition, 2002); and coauthor of The Boundaries of International Law: A Feminist Analysis (MLR, 2000). The last was awarded the Certificate of Merit of the American Society of International Law. She is also a member of the editorial board of the American Journal of International Law.

"As you listen to skilled attorneys and work with judges, you realize the kind of sophisticated, complex understanding they have of what the law means and how it informs so many facets of society. They believe that, they express it, and their work is better for it. At Michigan, I had the opportunity to learn from and work with a faculty that was committed to helping students appreciate that kind of complexity."

Abigail V. Carter, '00
Associate, Bredhoff & Kaiser
Washington, D.C.

J. Christopher McCrudden

J. Christopher McCrudden teaches in the areas of international, European, and comparative human rights, and is interested in the relationship between international economic law and labor rights. He is currently writing a book titled Buying Social Justice about the relationship between public procurement and equality. He is Fellow and Tutor in Law at Lincoln College, Oxford. Professor of Human Rights Law in the University of Oxford; a non-practicing Barrister-at-Law (Gray's Inn); and an Overseas Affiliated Professor of Law at the University of Michigan Law School. McCrudden holds an L.L.B. from Queen's University, Belfast, an L.L.M. from Yale, and a D.Phil. from Oxford. He specializes in human rights (international, European, and comparative), and currently concentrates on issues of equality and discrimination and the relationship between international economic law and human rights. He is a member of the editorial boards of several journals, including European Public Law, the Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, the International Journal of Discrimination and the Law, and the Journal of International Economic Law, as well as being co-editor of the Law in Context series, and he serves on the European Commission's Expert Network on the Application of the Gender Equality Directives, and is a scientific director of the European Commission's network of experts on non-discrimination. He is also a member of the Procurement Board for Northern Ireland.
International Court of Justice
Judge Bruno E. Simma first came to the Law School in 1986 as a visiting professor. From 1987 to 1992, he held a joint appointment on the faculty while also serving on the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and as vice president of the German Society of International Law. In 1995, Simma was both a visiting professor at the Law School and a lecturer at The Hague Academy of International Law. Since 1997, he has been a member of the Law School’s Affiliated Overseas Faculty. Some of his other experience includes serving as dean of the Munich Faculty of Law, being a member of the UN International Law Commission, serving as Professor of International Law and European Community Law, and as director of the Institute of International Law at the University of Munich. Professor Simma has been co-agent and counsel in cases before the International Court of Justice and has provided expertise for conflict-prevention activities of the UN Secretary General. He serves as a member of the Court of Arbitration in Sports of the International Olympic Committee. He is also co-founder and co-editor of the European Journal of International Law. In 2003 Bruno Simma was admitted to the prestigious Institut de Droit International.

"My love for Michigan is profound for the simple reason that the faculty take students and our intellectual processes seriously. The Socratic method works in two directions: Professors and students ask questions of each other. Nothing is taken as settled, and that’s as it should be in law."

Amna Akbar, ’04
Judicial Clerk to Judge Gerard E. Lynch
U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York
New York City, New York

Faculty photography by Marcia Ledford, University of Michigan Photo Services

The University of Michigan, as an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer, complies with all applicable federal and state laws regarding nondiscrimination and affirmative action, including Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. The University of Michigan is committed to a policy of nondiscrimination and equal opportunity for all persons regardless of race, sex, color, religion, creed, national origin or ancestry, age, marital status, sexual orientation, disability, or Vietnam-era veteran status in employment, educational programs and activities, and admissions. Inquiries or complaints may be addressed to the Senior Director for Institutional Equity and Title IX/Section 504 Coordinator, Office for Institutional Equity, 7073 Administrative Services Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-7073, 734-764-2515, TTY 734-764-3168. For other University of Michigan information call 734-764-1817.
International Court of Justice
Judge Bruno E. Simma first came to the Law School in 1986 as a visiting professor. From 1987 to 1992, he held a joint appointment on the faculty while also serving on the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and as vice president of the German Society of International Law. In 1995, Simma was both a visiting professor at the Law School and a lecturer at The Hague Academy of International Law. Since 1997, he has been a member of the Law School’s Affiliated Overseas Faculty. Some of his other experience includes serving as dean of the Munich Faculty of Law, being a member of the UN International Law Commission, serving as Professor of International Law and European Community Law and as director of the Institute of International Law at the University of Munich.

Professor Simma has been co-agent and counsel in cases before the International Court of Justice and has provided expertise for conflict-prevention activities of the UN Secretary General. He serves as a member of the Court of Arbitration in Sports of the International Olympic Committee. He is also co-founder and co-editor of the European Journal of International Law. In 2003 Bruno Simma was admitted to the prestigious Institut de Droit International.

“My love for Michigan is profound for the simple reason that the faculty take students and our intellectual processes seriously. The Socratic method works in two directions: Professors and students ask questions of each other. Nothing is taken as settled, and that’s as it should be in law.”

Amna Akbar, '04
Judicial Clerk to Judge Gerard E. Lynch
U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York
New York City, New York