In addition to appraisals of the convention and its product, the study also includes an extensive examination of the document's substantive contents with special attention to controversial issues, and chapters dealing with such topics as the organization, administration, procedure and principal political forces of the convention. The study was made under the auspices of IPA and is based largely on published official materials, personal interviews, and direct observation of convention in action.

EDITOR'S WASTEBASKET:

Professors Wellman and Polasky will speak at the Third Annual Probate Seminar which is being presented by The Institute of Continuing Legal Education. The seminar will take place May 16-18 at Boyne Mountain Lodge. Professor Polasky will speak on "Recent Estate and Gift Tax Development" and "Preservation of the Small Family Estate." Professor Wellman's talk is entitled "Probate Avoidance Techniques and Devices."

Professor Julin will be joined by Professors Whitmore Gray and Otto Ulc on Quest for Certainty, Sunday at noon over WJ-TV. Professor Ulc is a former Communist District Court Judge from Czechoslovakia. They will discuss comparative law, particularly that of the Anglo-American countries and the Communist nations.

An ominous sign of what lies ahead for law students is the decision of the Northwestern University School of Law to require comprehensive examinations as a pre-requisite to graduation. The requirement will apply to all students entering this coming September or thereafter. The exam will cover all required subjects and will consist of 18 questions, each 20 minutes in length.

Anthony Lewis, who spoke at the Lawyers Club this spring, was recently awarded his second Pulitzer Prize for his work as a Supreme Court reporter. Hats off to the Speakers Committee for bringing him here.

MISCELLANEOUS:

Plans are presently being made for the 1963-64 Speakers Program. All are encouraged to submit their suggestions for people that they would like to hear speak at the Law Club. Contact: Gregg Stover or Bill Rutherford, B-22, NO2-7707... The Law Wives are having their annual Exam Bake Sale for hungry law students on May 20 and 21, after 8:00 p.m. in the basement of the library. Coffee, cookies and sandwiches will be going for only one thin nickle... Anyone interested in working on the Res Gestae next year should contact Roger Marce, D-42. There are currently 47 openings on the staff.
