THOMAS M. COOLEY LECTURES NOW IN PROGRESS: Each year, "for the purpose of stimulating research and presenting its results in the form of public lectures, the faculty of The University of Michigan Law School established the Thomas M. Cooley Lectureship in honor of its first great legal scholar." This year the Thomas M. Cooley lecturer is Dr. H.W.R. Wade, Professor of English Law at St. Johns College of Oxford University. Dr. Wade's topic is "Towards Administrative Justice", and is being presented in a series of five afternoon lectures. Dr. Wade's first lecture was on Wednesday afternoon, at which time he introduced his audience to his topic with a lecture entitled "The Mission of the Law". Lecture number two was presented on Thursday when Dr. Wade spoke on the subtopic of "Dependence or Independence?" There will be three more lectures in this series on Monday, Oct. 23, and Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 24 and 25. The lectures begin at 4:15 p.m. and are presented in room 100 of Hutchins Hall.

WHO WAS THOMAS M. COOLEY? When the University of Michigan Law School was organized in 1859, a little over one hundred years ago, it had a faculty composed of three men, one of whom was Thomas M. Cooley. In 1864 Professor Cooley became Mr. Justice Cooley, for it was in that year that he was appointed to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan, on which bench he sat until 1885. In those days the volume of litigation was not nearly what it is today, and the Law School was a much smaller and much less complex institution. These factors plus a tremendous capability and love of the law enabled Professor Cooley not only to remain on the Law School faculty during his judgeship, but enabled him to accept the position of Dean of the Law School in 1871. Familiar to all legal scholars of the time were Professor Cooley's classic works on "Constitutional Limitations" and on "Torts".

It is only fitting that the annual lectureship presented by the Law School faculty and made possible by the William W. Cook Endowment for Legal Research, be entitled THE THOMAS M. COOLEY LECTURES.

OKLAHOMA ARBITRATION EXPERT VISITS FOR ONE SEMESTER: Each Thursday, Friday, and Saturday morning well over one hundred students begin their day delving into the problems of labor-management relations with Professor Frank Elkouri. Prof. Elkouri is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma where he received both his BA and LL.B. degrees. He is no stranger to the University of Michigan campus. From 1947 until 1950 he studied here earning his LM degree ('47-'48) and his SJD degree ('49-'50).

Professor Elkouri's special field is labor law, and he has been quite active in actual labor-management arbitration. One thing he doesn't have to worry about is boring his wife with legalistic dinner-table conversation. Edna Asper Elkouri is also a lawyer having attended the George Washington School. Professor and Mrs. Elkouri are co-authors of a new book: How Arbitration Works. The Professor is also the author of Trade Regulation: Cases and Materials.

"Well folks," began Professor Elkouri in his friendly Oklahoma manner, "I always seem to bring good luck to the football teams of the universities where I study and teach." Michigan's teams in the late forties and Oklahoma's dominations of the '50's speak well for this conclusion. But whether the Big Blue wins the Big Ten or not Professor Elkouri has brought much more to our university than football luck. He is certainly a welcome addition to the faculty and all are sorry his stay with us here can't be longer.

NEWS FLASHES

BOARD OF GOVERNORS MEETS SATURDAY MORNING: Tomorrow morning at 10:30 a.m. the Board of Governors of the Lawyers Club will meet here in the Law Quadrangle. Several members of the board will arrive in Ann Arbor this evening and will be spending the night in the guest rooms of the Club and also in some of the regular students' quarters.

RES GESTAE ANNOUNCEMENTS: Any organization or individual wishing to have an announcement published in Res Gestae please place such necessary material in the Lawyers Club mail box on the third floor of Hutchins Hall. Be sure all of these notices are signed and a telephone number is given where additional information may be found if necessary.

QUAD BITES THE DUST: Due to the change in government in the Lawyers Club the Board of Directors, after talking with the past editor and publisher of the law school year book, THE QUAD, has found it infeasible to publish such a volume this year. Since the main purpose of this publication was to provide seniors with a photographic record of their class, negotiations are now being made with a photographer for a composite picture of the entire graduating class.
