The Online Companion of the Michigan Law Review

Call for Submissions

The editors of the Michigan Law Review invite essay submissions on current areas of legal thought and research for First Impressions, our online publication.

First Impressions publishes op-ed style articles by academics, judges, practitioners, and law students, as well as timely responses to articles in the print journal of the Michigan Law Review. Our online companion quickly disseminates the legal community's initial impressions of important judicial decisions and legislative developments.

First Impressions prefers submissions under 3,000 words and cannot accept essays over 3,500 words. Submissions should be written in a style accessible to a general audience of practitioners and policymakers. Pieces will be published on an expedited production schedule.

Is Administrative Law
Unlawful?

Philip Hamburger

Cloth
$55.00

“Is Administrative Law Unlawful?” is a work of the very highest quality, a learned scholarly exegesis setting out the intellectual foundations—in medieval and early modern English constitutional thought—for the proposition that the contemporary American administrative state is profoundly unconstitutional and unlawful. Philip Hamburger’s argument is intricately wrought and forcefully expressed. Its indictment of modern administration in America doubles as a major statement on the virtues of a genuinely constitutional government.”

—Ken I. Kersch, Boston College

“With characteristic erudition, Philip Hamburger shows how virtually every aspect of the modern administrative state undermines the Anglo-American legal tradition—or at least that part of the tradition that most informed the American founding. It is a provocative thesis, but one that is amply supported by extensive scholarly argument and fascinating historical study. Hamburger makes an impressive case that modern administrative law owes its lineage to claims of monarchical prerogative and civil law absolutism that were precisely the ideas that the American revolution was trying to reject. This is a tremendously important book.”

—Gary S. Lawson, Boston University School of Law
