University of Michigan Law School Faculty, 2010-2011

University of Michigan Law School

Follow this and additional works at: http://repository.law.umich.edu/miscellaneous

Part of the Legal Biography Commons, and the Legal Education Commons

Citation
http://repository.law.umich.edu/miscellaneous/15

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School History and Publications at University of Michigan Law School Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Miscellaneous Law School Publications by an authorized administrator of University of Michigan Law School Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact mlaw.repository@umich.edu.
Table of Contents

3 Letter from the Dean

4 Law Faculty

74 William W. Cook Global Law Professors

80 Legal Practice Faculty

89 Professors from Practice, Fellows, and Affiliated Faculty
University of Michigan Law School

Faculty

To turn the pages of this book is to come to know some of the most distinguished scholars in the world. Among these members of the Michigan Law faculty are leaders in constitutional, international, tax, environmental, and business law, and in many other areas of scholarship as well. For students expecting to build a world-class legal education, there is no better foundation.

But these printed pages exist in only two dimensions, while legal education, like the real world, exists in three. Stepping inside the magnificent buildings of the University of Michigan Law Quad brings these photographs and stories to life. Two-dimensional biographies become three-dimensional professors with remarkable scholarly and real-life experience.

Here, beneath the vaulted ceilings of Hutchins Hall, we have welcomed back a professor after serving two years as the assistant Treasury secretary; we celebrate a collaboration among our international law faculty and Jindal Law School in India; we gain insight from our environmental law faculty about environmental crime in the aftermath of the Gulf oil spill; and we work with clinical faculty addressing critical issues of children’s welfare, human trafficking, international deal-making, and the exoneration of the wrongly accused—to name just a few.

Here, professors with experience hard-won as advisers to presidents or advocates before the Supreme Court now turn their energy and talent to preparing members of our extraordinary and diverse student body for a life in the law.

As I looked through the pages of this book, something else struck me that I know will resonate with the Michigan Law community. The photographs accurately depict the friendliness, engagement, and warmth of the Michigan faculty. There is a collegiality among our faculty members and within our community that, somehow, the images in this publication have captured.

The intellectual vitality, the real-life experience, the engagement, the collegiality. Combined, it’s the heart of a Michigan Law education. Welcome.

Evan Caminker, Dean
Branch Rickey Collegiate Professor of Law
University of Michigan Law School
Alicia Alvarez is a clinical professor of law and director of the Urban Communities Clinic, where she represents community-based organizations. Her areas of interest are issues facing low-income communities. She also has taught in the Michigan Clinical Law Program, focusing on employment law. Prior to coming to the Law School, Alvarez taught the Community Development Clinic at DePaul University College of Law. She also taught in the Asylum and Immigration Clinic and the Civil Litigation Clinic. She has been a visiting professor at the Boston College Law School and the University of El Salvador. Alvarez was a Fulbright Scholar in El Salvador and has consulted with clinics throughout Latin America. She serves on the ABA Clinical Skills Committee, and served on the planning committee for the 2010 Association of American Law Schools Clinical Conference and on the board of directors of the Society of American Law Teachers. Before teaching she was a staff attorney at Business and Professional People for the Public Interest and the Legal Assistance Foundation of Chicago. Alvarez received her B.A., magna cum laude, from Loyola University of Chicago and her J.D., cum laude, from Boston College Law School.
Reuven S. Avi-Yonah, the Irwin I. Cohn Professor of Law and director of the International Tax LL.M. Program, specializes in corporate and international taxation and international law. He has served as a consultant to the U.S. Treasury Department and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) on tax competition, and is a member of the Steering Group of the OECD's International Network for Tax Research. He is also chair of the ABA's Tax Section Committee on Tax Policy. Avi-Yonah is a fellow of the American Bar Foundation and a member of the board of trustees of Diritto e Practica Tributario Internazionale. He is also an honorary research fellow at the Taxation Law and Policy Research Institute at Monash University and an international research fellow at Oxford University's Centre for Business Taxation. In addition to prior teaching appointments at Harvard University (law) and Boston College (history), he has practiced law with Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy in New York; with Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz, New York; and with Ropes & Gray, Boston. After receiving his B.A., summa cum laude, from Hebrew University, he earned three additional degrees from Harvard University: an A.M. in history, a Ph.D. in history, and a J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School.

DEGREES
B.A., Hebrew University, A.M., Ph.D., J.D., Harvard
DEGREES
B.A., University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; J.D., Harvard

Professor Samuel Bagenstos specializes in civil rights law, particularly as it pertains to the Americans with Disabilities Act, and constitutional law. His research and teaching focus on the substance and enforcement of civil rights law, both constitutional and statutory. He is also an active appellate and U.S. Supreme Court litigator in civil rights and federalism cases. In United States v. Georgia (2006), the Supreme Court upheld, as applied to his client's case, the constitutionality of Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Prior to joining Michigan Law, Bagenstos was a professor of law, and, from 2007 to 2008, also associate dean for research and faculty development at Washington University School of Law. He clerked for Judge Stephen Reinhardt of the Ninth Circuit, then joined the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. He also served as law clerk for Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg of the Supreme Court. In 1993, Bagenstos earned his J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard, where he received the Fay Diploma and was articles office co-chair for the Harvard Law Review. He is currently on leave from the Law School to serve as the principal deputy assistant attorney general of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice.
Professor Nicholas Bagley teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, regulatory theory, and health law. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, he was an attorney with the appellate staff in the Civil Division at the U.S. Department of Justice, where he acted as lead counsel in more than two dozen civil appeals and argued nine cases before the U.S. Courts of Appeals. Bagley also served as a law clerk to Justice John Paul Stevens of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge David S. Tatel of the U.S. Court of Appeals. He holds a B.A. in English from Yale University and received his J.D., summa cum laude, from the New York University School of Law. Before entering law school, he joined Teach for America and taught eighth-grade English at a public school in the South Bronx. Bagley’s work has appeared in the Columbia Law Review, the New York University Law Review, the Harvard Journal on Legislation, The Washington Post, and Slate com. His article, “Centralized Oversight of the Regulatory State,” which he coauthored with Richard Revesz, was selected as the best article in the field in 2006 by the American Bar Association’s Section on Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice. In August 2010, Bagley testified before the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts about agency capture.
Professor Michael S. Barr teaches financial institutions, international finance, transnational law, and jurisdiction and choice of law, and cofounded the International Transactions Clinic. He was on leave from 2009–2010, serving as the assistant secretary for financial institutions at the U.S. Department of the Treasury. He was a key architect of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. He previously served as a senior fellow at the Center for American Progress and at the Brookings Institution. Barr conducts large-scale empirical research regarding financial services and writes about a wide range of issues in financial regulation. He is the co-editor of Building Inclusive Financial Systems (Brookings Press, 2007, co-edited with Kumar and Litan) and Insufficient Funds (Russell Sage, 2009, co-edited with Blank). Barr previously served as special assistant to Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin, as deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury, as special advisor to former President William J. Clinton, as a special advisor and counselor on the policy planning staff at the U.S. State Department, and as a law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice David H. Souter and then-District Judge Pierre N. Leval of the Southern District of New York. He received his J.D. from Yale Law School; as a Rhodes Scholar, an M.Phil. in international relations from Magdalen College, Oxford University; and his B.A., summa cum laude, with honors in history, from Yale University.
Since joining Michigan Law in 2003, Professor Laura Beny has taught courses on corporate finance, enterprise organization, international finance, and the public corporation, and an advanced seminar in law and finance. Her research interests include law and economics, finance, political economy, development, and the Sudan. Her work has been published in the American Economic Review, American Law and Economics Review, and Journal of Corporation Law, among others, and will be forthcoming in 2011–2012 in the Annual Review of Law and Social Science. In fall 2010, Beny taught a new seminar, Critical Issues in Law and Development, as a visiting professor of law at Duke Law School. In 2009, she and economist Melody Atil cofounded Peace Dividend, an online lending platform that facilitates direct lending to Southern Sudanese entrepreneurs. In 2007 and 2008, she advised the government of Southern Sudan on corporate governance and transparency in the private sector. In September 2006, Beny presented testimony based on her research on insider trading before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee. Before teaching at Michigan Law, she practiced private and pro bono law at Debevoise & Plimpton, an international law firm based in New York City. Beny earned her M.A. and Ph.D. in economics from Harvard University, her J.D. from Harvard Law School, and her B.A. in economics from Stanford University.
Evan H. Caminker, the Branch Rickey Collegiate Professor of Law and dean of the Law School since 2003, writes, teaches, and litigates about various issues of American constitutional law, focusing on individual rights, federalism, and the nature of judicial decision making. He has taught constitutional law, civil procedure, and federal courts, and has lectured widely before professional, scholarly, and student audiences. His scholarship has appeared in the Michigan Law Review, the Yale Law Journal, the Columbia Law Review, the Stanford Law Review, and the Supreme Court Review. Prior to taking on his responsibilities as dean, he served as associate dean for academic affairs.

Caminker came to Michigan Law from UCLA Law School, where he taught from 1991 to 1999. He received his B.A., summa cum laude, from UCLA and his J.D. from Yale Law School. Caminker clerked for Justice William Brennan of the U.S. Supreme Court and for Judge William Norris of the Ninth Circuit. He also practiced law with the Center for Law in the Public Interest in Los Angeles and with Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering in Washington, D.C. From May 2000 to January 2001, he served as deputy assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel, U.S. Department of Justice.
Professor Debra Chopp has been teaching in the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic since 2007 and focuses primarily on special education law and family law. Prior to joining the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic, she was a staff attorney with the Pediatric Advocacy Initiative at Michigan Law. Chopp has represented survivors of domestic violence as an attorney for Sanctuary for Families: Center for Battered Women's Legal Services in New York and has lobbied Congress for improved highway safety laws as a legislative assistant at Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety in Washington, D.C. She earned her B.A. in political science from the University of Michigan and her J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania Law School.
Professor Sherman J. Clark joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1995 and teaches courses in torts, evidence, and sports law. His current research examines the ways in which certain legal rules and institutions can serve as fora for the construction and articulation of community meaning and identity. In this vein, he has written about institutions and practices ranging from direct democracy to the jury to criminal procedure. Another line of research focuses on the nature and normative status of persuasive legal argument. In addition to his teaching and research interests, Clark served as an adviser to lawyers for Wayne County, Michigan, and the City of Detroit in their efforts to hold gun manufacturers liable for allegedly negligent distribution practices. The legal theory he articulated, known as the "willful blindness" theory, focused on the manufacturers’ alleged knowing exploitation of a thriving secondary market in the indirect sale of firearms to felons and minors. Clark is a graduate of Towson State University and the Harvard Law School. Before coming to Michigan Law, he practiced law in Washington, D.C., with the firm of Kirkland & Ellis.
Professor Edward H. Cooper joined the Law School faculty in 1972 and was named the Thomas M. Cooley Professor of Law in 1988. He is the coauthor, with the late C.A. Wright and A.R. Miller, of the original, second, and new third editions of Federal Practice & Procedure: Jurisdiction, a leading multi-volume treatise on federal jurisdiction and procedure, and his articles have contributed to legal scholarship for 40 years. From 1991 to 1992, Cooper served as a member of the U.S. Judicial Conference Civil Rules Advisory Committee. He has served as the committee’s reporter since 1992. In addition, he has been a member of the Council of the American Law Institute since 1988 and has served as adviser on several of its projects. Cooper graduated with an A.B. from Dartmouth College and earned his LL.B. at Harvard Law School. He served as a law clerk to the Hon. Clifford O’Sullivan, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and later practiced in Detroit. He was an associate professor at the University of Minnesota Law School for five years before joining the Michigan Law faculty.
Professor Daniel Crane teaches contracts, antitrust, antitrust and intellectual property, and various advanced antitrust courses. He previously was professor of law at Yeshiva University's Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law, and a visiting professor at New York University Law School and the University of Chicago Law School. In spring 2009, he taught antitrust law on a Fulbright Scholarship at the Universidade Católica Portuguesa in Lisbon. His recent scholarship has focused primarily on antitrust and economic regulation, particularly the institutional structure of antitrust enforcement, predatory pricing, bundling, and the antitrust implications of various patent practices. Crane's work has appeared in the University of Chicago Law Review, the California Law Review, the Michigan Law Review, and the Cornell Law Review, among other journals. He is the author of several books on antitrust law and has books forthcoming in 2011 and 2012 with Oxford University Press, one on the institutional structure of antitrust enforcement and the other on the intellectual history of competition policy.
Professor Steven P. Croley teaches and writes in the areas of administrative law, civil procedure, regulation, torts, and related subjects. He is currently on leave to serve as the special assistant to the president for justice and regulatory policy with the Obama Administration’s Domestic Policy Council. He began his teaching career at Michigan Law in 1993 and was associate dean for academic affairs from 2003 to 2006. From 2006 to 2010, he served as a special assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan. His scholarly research appears, among other places, in the Administrative Law Journal, the Chicago Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Harvard Law Review. His latest work, Regulation and Public Interests: The Possibility of Good Regulatory Government, is published by Princeton University Press. A member of the Michigan bar, Croley received an A.B. from the University of Michigan, where he was a James B. Angell Scholar. He earned his J.D. from the Yale Law School, where he was articles editor of the Yale Law Journal, a John M. Olin Student Fellow, and winner of the John M. Olin Prize and the Benjamin Scharps Prize. He also earned a Ph.D. in politics from Princeton University. Following law school, he served as a law clerk for Judge Stephen Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit.

DEGREES
A.B., University of Michigan; J.D., Yale; M.A., Ph.D., Princeton
DEGREES
B.A., Brown; J.D., New York University

Kristina Daugirdas

Professor Kristina Daugirdas teaches courses on international organizations and environmental law. Her writing focuses on the relationships between U.S. laws and regulations and negotiating and implementing international agreements and obligations. Her recent article, published in the Maryland Law Review, evaluated constitutional challenges to legislation and regulations implementing international agreements. It earned an award from the American Constitution Society's 2008 Richard D. Cudahy Writing Competition on Regulatory and Administrative Law. Before joining the Michigan Law faculty, Daugirdas was an attorney-adviser at the U.S. Department of State, where her portfolios included providing guidance on the negotiation and implementation of U.N. Security Council sanctions and evaluating the appropriateness of amicus participation by the U.S. government in lawsuits with foreign policy implications. She also clerked for Judge Stephen F. Williams of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. She earned her J.D., magna cum laude, from the New York University School of Law, and her B.A., with honors, from Brown University.
Since joining the Michigan Law faculty in fall 2004, Professor Alicia J. Davis has taught enterprise organization, mergers and acquisitions, and the law and economics workshop. Her current research includes projects in the securities regulation area. Before coming to Michigan Law, Davis practiced law at Kirkland & Ellis LLP in Washington, D.C., where she represented public and private companies and private equity firms in mergers and acquisitions and leveraged buyout transactions. Her professional experience also includes five years as an investment banker, first with Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York, where her clients included Fortune 100 companies pursuing equity and debt financings, and later with Raymond James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Florida, where she most recently served as a vice president and represented public and private companies in middle market mergers and acquisitions transactions. Davis is a member of the Florida and District of Columbia bars. She earned her B.S. in business administration, summa cum laude, from Florida A&M University, her MBA from Harvard Business School, and her J.D. from Yale Law School.
Professor Donald N. Duquette, '74, founded the Child Advocacy Law Clinic, the oldest such clinic in the United States, in 1976. His 1990 book, Advocating for the Child in Protection Proceedings, formed the conceptual framework for the first national evaluation of child representation as mandated by the U.S. Congress. His most recent book, Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect and Dependency Proceedings, Second Edition (Bradford Legal Publishers, 2010), defines the scope and duties of a new legal specialty in child welfare law and prepares experienced lawyers for a national certifying examination. Duquette collaborated with the National Association of Counsel for Children to develop the national certification program, which gained American Bar Association accreditation in February 2004 and is now available as a specialty in 29 U.S. jurisdictions. In October 2009, the U.S. Children's Bureau made a $5 million, five-year grant to Michigan Law to serve as the National Quality Improvement Center for Child Advocacy, with Duquette as the director. A graduate of Michigan State University, Duquette was a social worker specializing in child protection and foster care prior to earning his J.D. at Michigan Law in 1974. Before joining the faculty, he served as an assistant professor of pediatrics and human development at Michigan State University.
Rebecca S. Eisenberg, the Robert and Barbara Luciano Professor of Law, has written and lectured extensively about the role of intellectual property in biopharmaceutical research. She also has played an active role in policy debates concerning intellectual property in research science. Eisenberg teaches courses on patent law, trademark law, and FDA law, and conducts workshops on intellectual property and student scholarship. She previously taught courses on torts, legal regulation of science, and legal issues in biomedical research. Eisenberg is a graduate of Stanford University and Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California, Berkeley, where she was articles editor of the California Law Review. Following law school, she clerked for Chief Judge Robert F. Peckham of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California. She joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1984.
Phoebe Ellsworth, the Frank Murphy Distinguished University Professor of Law and Psychology, has conducted pioneering scholarship in the field of psychology and law. She has published widely on the subjects of person perception and emotion, public opinion and the death penalty, and jury behavior. Her most recent articles have appeared in American Psychologist, Human Nature, and the Journal of Law and Social Change. She holds a joint appointment in the Psychology Department at the University of Michigan. Ellsworth is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Law and Society Association and the Executive Board of the Death Penalty Information Center, and an international review committee member for the Swiss National Science Foundation. She is a graduate of Harvard and Stanford universities.
Richard D. Friedman, the Alene and Allan F. Smith Professor of Law, is an expert on evidence and U.S. Supreme Court history and is the general editor of The New Wigmore, a multi-volume treatise on evidence. In addition to having written numerous law review articles and essays, he is the author of the well-known textbook The Elements of Evidence, now in its third edition, and coauthor of Waltz, Park & Friedman's Evidence: Cases and Materials, now in its eleventh edition. In Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), the Supreme Court radically transformed the law governing the right of a criminal defendant to confront the witnesses against him by adopting a "testimonial" approach, which Friedman had long advocated. He now maintains the Confrontation Blog, www.confrontationright.blogspot.com, to comment on related issues and developments, and has successfully argued two follow-up cases, Hammon v. Indiana and Briscoe v. Virginia, in the Supreme Court. Friedman earned a B.A. and a J.D. from Harvard, both magna cum laude, and served as an editor of the Harvard Law Review. He also earned a D.Phil. in modern history from Oxford University. He clerked for Judge Irving Kaufman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and later practiced law in New York City. He joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1988 from Yeshiva University's Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law.
DEGREES
B.A., Trinity College; Ph.D., Princeton

Bruce W. Frier is the John and Teresa D'Arms Distinguished University Professor of Classics and Roman Law. He is the author of numerous books and articles on economic and social history, focusing especially on Roman law. His publications include Landlords and Tenants in Imperial Rome, The Rise of the Roman Jurists, A Casebook on the Roman Law of Delict, A Casebook on Roman Family Law, and, most recently, The Modern Law of Contracts, written with Law School faculty member J.J. White. In addition to his Law School professorship, Frier served from 2001 to 2002 as the interim chair for the Department of Classical Studies at the University of Michigan and holds a joint appointment in that department. He is a member of both the American Philosophical Society and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He received a B.A. from Trinity College and a Ph.D. in classics from Princeton University. He was a fellow of the American Academy in Rome and taught at Bryn Mawr College before joining Michigan’s Department of Classical Studies in 1969. He has taught at the Law School since 1981.
Professor Philip M. Frost, '73, joined the Law School faculty in 1996 and is a clinical professor of law and director of the Legal Practice Program. Frost practiced with the Detroit-based law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman, now Dickinson, Wright PLLP, from 1974 through 1996, in the areas of commercial litigation, antitrust, and bankruptcy. He was a partner with the firm from 1981 to 1996 and chaired its hiring and pro bono committees. Frost received his B.A. in history from Yale University and earned his J.D., magna cum laude and Order of the Coif, at Michigan Law. Following law school, he served as a law clerk to the Hon. Philip Pratt of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan. Frost has served as a commercial panel arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association and has presented before the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts & Letters and the Legal Writing Institute. He also has served as chair of the Survey Committee of the Association of Legal Writing Directors and as an editor of Legal Writing: The Journal of the Legal Writing Institute.

DEGREES

B.A., Yale; J.D., University of Michigan
Samuel R. Gross, the Thomas G. and Mabel Long Professor of Law, teaches evidence, criminal procedure, and courses on the prosecution, conviction, and exoneration of innocent defendants. He has published works on false convictions, the death penalty, racial profiling, eyewitness identification, the use of expert witnesses, and the relationship between pretrial bargaining and trial verdicts. In recent years, Gross has focused on studying wrongful convictions. From 2004 to 2005, he conducted a major investigation that uncovered persuasive evidence that an executed defendant was innocent of the murder for which he was put to death. Gross graduated from Columbia College and earned his J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. He later worked as a criminal defense attorney in San Francisco for several years, as an attorney with the United Farm Workers Union in California and the Wounded Knee Legal Defense Committee in Nebraska and South Dakota, and as a cooperating attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund in New York. He has been a visiting lecturer at Yale Law School, a visiting professor at Columbia Law School, and taught for several years at the Stanford Law School.
Professor Monica Hakimi teaches and writes on public international law and U.S. foreign relations law. She is particularly interested in the informal and operational aspects of the international legal process, and the ways in which that process adapts to contemporary challenges. Her research examines those issues in the contexts of international human rights law, the law of armed conflict, and the use of force. Hakimi's publications include articles in the Yale Journal of International Law, the European Journal of International Law, and the Vanderbilt Journal of Transnational Law. She earned her J.D. from the Yale Law School in 2001, and her B.A., summa cum laude, from Duke University. Following law school, Hakimi clerked for Judge Kimba Wood of the Southern District of New York and later served as an attorney-adviser in the Office of the Legal Adviser at the U.S. Department of State, where she counseled policymakers on non-proliferation, the reconstruction of Iraq, international investment disputes, and civil aviation. She also served as counsel before the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal and worked on cases before the International Court of Justice, U.S. federal courts, and administrative agencies.
Daniel Halberstam

Daniel Halberstam, the Eric Stein Collegiate Professor of Law, is director of the European Legal Studies Program. He also was the founding director of the EU Center at the University of Michigan. Halberstam lectures throughout Europe and holds a position as professor of law at the College of Europe in Bruges. He serves on several advisory editorial boards, including Cambridge Studies in European Law and Policy (CUP) and the Common Market Law Review, and on the advisory boards of the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law in Heidelberg and the Institute for Advanced Study (Wissenschaftskolleg), Berlin, where he was a fellow for the 2009-2010 academic year. His work focuses on constitutional law, globalization, and comparative public law and legal theory. A graduate of Yale Law School, Halberstam was articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. He earned his B.A., summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, in mathematics from Columbia College, and his Abitur at the Gutenberg-Gymnasium in Wiesbaden. He served as a clerk for U.S. Supreme Court Justice David Souter and Judge Patricia Wald (D.C. Circuit), and as judicial fellow for Judge Peter Jann, European Court of Justice. He also served as attorney-adviser to Chairman Robert Pitofsky, U.S. Federal Trade Commission, and as attorney-adviser in the Office of Legal Counsel at the U.S. Department of Justice.
James C. Hathaway, a leading authority on international refugee law, is the James E. and Sarah A. Degan Professor of Law and director of the Program in Refugee and Asylum Law. He is also Distinguished Visiting Professor of International Refugee Law at the University of Amsterdam, professorial fellow of the University of Melbourne, and senior visiting research associate at Oxford University’s Refugee Studies Programme. He has been appointed a visiting professor at the American University in Cairo, and at the universities of California, Macerata, Tokyo, and Toronto. Hathaway was on leave from Michigan Law from 2008 to 2010 to serve as dean of law at the University of Melbourne, where he established Australia’s first all-graduate (J.D.) law program. Hathaway’s publications include more than 70 journal articles, a leading treatise on the refugee definition (The Law of Refugee Status, 1991), an interdisciplinary study of models for refugee law reform (Reconceiving International Refugee Law, 1997) and the first comprehensive of the international refugee rights regime (The Rights of Refugees under International Law, 2005). He serves as counsel on international protection to the U.S. Committee for Refugees and Immigrants and is founding patron and honorary director of Asylum Access, a nonprofit organization committed to delivering innovative legal aid to refugees in the global south.
Scott Hershovitz

Professor Scott Hershovitz teaches jurisprudence and tort law. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty, he clerked for Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge William A. Fletcher of the Ninth Circuit. In between these clerkships, he was a member of the appellate staff of the Civil Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. His publications include “Harry Potter and the Trouble with Tort Theory” in the Stanford Law Review, “Two Models of Tort (and Takings)” in the Virginia Law Review, “The Role of Authority” in Philosophers’ Imprint, “Legitimacy, Democracy, and Razian Authority” in Legal Theory, and “Wittgenstein on Rules: The Phantom Menace” in the Oxford Journal of Legal Studies. He is also the editor of Exploring Law’s Empire: The Jurisprudence of Ronald Dworkin (2006). Hershovitz graduated, summa cum laude, from the University of Georgia with an A.B. in political science and philosophy and an M.A. in philosophy. In addition to a J.D. from the Yale Law School, he holds a D.Phil. in law from the University of Oxford, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar.
Don Herzog is the Edson R. Sunderland Professor of Law. His main teaching interests are political, moral, legal, and social theory; constitutional interpretation; torts; and the First Amendment. He is the author of Without Foundations: Justification in Political Theory; Happy Slaves: A Critique of Consent Theory; Poisoning the Minds of the Lower Orders; and Cunning. Herzog holds an A.B. from Cornell University and an A.M. and Ph.D. from Harvard University, where he studied government. He joined the Political Science Department at the University of Michigan in 1983 and holds a joint appointment with that department and the Law School.
James R. Hines Jr. is the L. Hart Wright Collegiate Professor of Law and codirector of the Law and Economics Program. He is also the Richard A. Musgrave Collegiate Professor of Economics in the Department of Economics and serves as the research director of the Office of Tax Policy Research in the Stephen M. Ross School of Business. His research is focused on various aspects of taxation. Hines taught at Princeton and Harvard universities prior to joining Michigan Law in 1997, and has held visiting appointments at Columbia University; the London School of Economics; the University of California, Berkeley; and Harvard Law School. He is a research associate for the National Bureau of Economic Research, research director of the International Tax Policy Forum, co-editor of the American Economic Association’s Journal of Public Economics, and once, long ago, served as an economist in the U.S. Department of Commerce. He holds a B.A. and M.A. from Yale University and a Ph.D. from Harvard, all in economics.
Professor Jill R. Horwitz is codirector of the Law and Economics Program. She is also a professor of health policy and management in the School of Public Health. Her scholarly interests include health law and policy, nonprofit law and policy, torts, and empirical law and economics. She holds a B.A. with honors from Northwestern University and an M.P.P., J.D., magna cum laude, and Ph.D. in health policy, all from Harvard University. Horwitz was a law clerk for Judge Norman Stahl of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. She recently served as a visiting professor in the Department of Economics, Law, and Public Administration at the University of Victoria in British Columbia. Horwitz is a faculty research fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research, an advisor of the American Law Institute, a fellow at the National Academy of Social Insurance, and a member of the bar of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In addition, she is on the core faculties of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Clinical and Health Policy Scholars programs.
DEGREES
B.A., Williams College; J.D., Columbia

As a transactional attorney, Howson participated in several precedent-setting transactions, including the first Rule 144A offering from Europe and the first SEC-registered IPO on the New York Stock Exchange by a Chinese issuer. He publishes widely on the subject of Chinese corporate and capital markets developments and on China's legal reform. A member of the Council on Foreign Relations, he is a past chair of the Asian Affairs Committee of the New York Bar Association, and serves on the executive committee of the University of Michigan Center for Chinese Studies. He currently serves as an arbitrator for the China International Economic and Trade Arbitration Commission in Beijing.

Howson graduated from Williams College and the Columbia Law School, and from 1983 to 1985 did graduate work at Shanghai's Fudan University. In the second half of 1988, he completed research on Qing dynasty penal law at Beijing University and the China University of Politics and Law under a Ford Foundation grant.
Professor Ellen D. Katz writes and teaches about election law, civil rights and remedies, and equal protection. Her scholarship addresses questions of minority representation, political equality, and the role of institutions in crafting and implementing anti-discrimination laws. Katz has published numerous articles including an influential empirical study of litigation under the Voting Rights Act. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty, she practiced as an attorney with the appellate sections of the U.S. Department of Justice’s Civil Division and its Environment and Natural Resources Division. She was a judicial clerk for Justice David H. Souter of the U.S. Supreme Court, and for Judge Judith W. Rogers of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. Katz received her B.A. in history, summa cum laude, from Yale College in 1991 and earned her J.D. from Yale Law School in 1994, where she served as an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal.
Professor Vikramaditya S. Khanna earned his S.J.D. at Harvard Law School, where he has been a visiting faculty member. He served as a senior research fellow at Columbia Law School and Yale Law School and as a visiting scholar at Stanford Law School. He received the John M. Olin Faculty Fellowship in 2002-2003. His interest areas include corporate and securities law, corporate crime, law in India, corporate governance in emerging markets, and law and economics. He is the founding and current editor of India Law Abstracts and White Collar Crime Abstracts at Social Science Research Network and is a term member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He has testified before the U.S. Congress and his papers have been published in the Harvard Law Review, the Michigan Law Review, the Supreme Court Economic Review, the Journal of Empirical Legal Studies, and the Georgetown Law Journal. News publications in the United States, India, Germany, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom have quoted him. He has given talks at Harvard, Columbia, Stanford and Yale universities; the University of California, Berkeley; and the Wharton School, as well as to the National Bureau of Economic Research and the American Law and Economics Association. He has presented in the United States, India, China, Turkey, Greece and Brazil.
DEGREES
B.A., Yeshiva University; J.D., Cardozo Law School;
A.M., Ph.D., Harvard

Professor Madeline Kochen’s research and teaching interests include property, theories of justice and obligation, Talmudic law, and constitutional law. She earned her B.A., magna cum laude, and her J.D. from Yeshiva University’s Benjamin N. Cardozo Law School. In addition, she holds an A.M. in Near Eastern languages and civilizations and a Ph.D. in religion and political philosophy from Harvard University. Following law school, Kochen worked in New York as a criminal appeals attorney with the Legal Aid Society and as staff attorney and legislative counsel with the American Civil Liberties Union. She also founded and directed the NYCLU Women’s Rights/Reproductive Rights Project. Before attending Harvard, Kochen taught at Stanford Law School, where she was director of public interest law and assistant dean of students. While working on her dissertation, she was a fellow at Harvard’s Center for Ethics and the Professions, taught Talmudic and Jewish law to faculty and students at Harvard Law School, and spent three years at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey.
James E. Krier, the Earl Warren DeLano Professor of Law, has taught courses on contracts, property, trusts and estates, behavioral law and economics, and pollution policy. His research interests are primarily in the fields of property and law and economics, and he is the author or coauthor of several books, including Environmental Law and Policy, Pollution and Policy, and Property (7th edition). Krier's most recent articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review, the Supreme Court Economic Review, the UCLA Law Review, and the Cornell Law Review. A professor of law at UCLA and Stanford before joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1983, he has been a visiting professor at both Harvard Law School and Yeshiva University's Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law. Krier earned his B.S. with honors and his J.D. with highest honors from the University of Wisconsin, where he was articles editor of the Wisconsin Law Review. After graduation from law school, he served for one year as law clerk to the Hon. Roger J. Traynor, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California. He then practiced law for two years with Arnold & Porter in Washington, D.C.

DEGREES

B.S., J.D., University of Wisconsin
Jessica Litman, the John F. Nickoll Professor of Law, is the author of Digital Copyright and the coauthor, with Jane Ginsburg and Mary Lou Kevlin, of the casebook Trademarks and Unfair Competition Law: Cases and Materials. Before rejoining the Law School faculty in 2006, Litman was a professor of law at Wayne State University in Detroit, a visiting professor at New York University Law School and American University Washington College of Law, and a professor at Michigan Law from 1984 to 1990. Litman is a past trustee of the Copyright Society of the USA and a past chair of the American Association of Law Schools Section on Intellectual Property. In addition to serving on the advisory board for the Public Knowledge organization, she is a member of the Intellectual Property and Internet Committee of the ACLU, the advisory council of the Future of Music Coalition, the advisory board of Cyberspace Law Abstracts, and the American Law Institute. She graduated from Reed College, earned an M.F.A. from Southern Methodist University, and holds a J.D. from Columbia Law School.
Kyle D. Logue, the Wade H. McCree Jr. Collegiate Professor of Law since 2006, teaches and writes in the areas of tax, torts, and insurance. His scholarly interests include tax policy, tort theory, risk regulation, and the economic analysis of law. Logue's articles have appeared in numerous academic journals and edited volumes, and he has given invited lectures and presented scholarly papers at many academic conferences and workshops around the world. Logue earned his B.A., summa cum laude, from Auburn University, where he was a National Harry S. Truman Scholar. He received his J.D. from Yale Law School, where he was an Olin Scholar and an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. Before teaching at Michigan Law, he served as a law clerk to the Hon. Patrick E. Higginbotham of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and worked for the law firm of Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan in Atlanta. Logue served as the Law School's associate dean for academic affairs from 2006 to 2008.
Catharine A. MacKinnon, the Elizabeth A. Long Professor of Law and long-term James Barr Ames Visiting Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, specializes in sex equality issues under international and constitutional law. She pioneered the legal claim for sexual harassment and, with Andrea Dworkin, created ordinances recognizing pornography as a civil rights violation. Representing Bosnian women survivors of Serbian genocidal sexual atrocities, MacKinnon won with co-counsel a damage award of $745 million in August 2000 in Kadic v. Karadzic, which first recognized rape as an act of genocide. The Supreme Court of Canada largely accepted her approaches to equality, pornography, and hate speech. Her scholarly works include Are Women Human? (2006), Women's Lives, Men's Laws (2005), Sex Equality (2001), Only Words (1993), and Toward a Feminist Theory of the State (1989), and her work has been documented to be among the most widely cited writings on law in the English language. MacKinnon holds a B.A. from Smith College, a J.D. from Yale Law School, and a Ph.D. in political science from Yale. She has taught at Yale, Chicago, Harvard, Osgoode Hall, Stanford, Basel, and Columbia, among others, and spent a year at the Institute for Advanced Study at Stanford. She practices and consults nationally and internationally, and works with Equality Now, an NGO promoting international sex equality rights for women, and the Coalition for Trafficking in Women. She is special gender adviser to the prosecutor of the International Criminal Court.
In addition to serving as associate dean for clinical affairs, Bridget M. McCormack is a clinical professor of law and codirector of the Michigan Innocence Clinic, a non-DNA clinic representing wrongfully convicted Michigan prisoners. She also has taught in the Michigan Clinical Law Program, focusing on criminal defense cases, criminal law, a domestic violence clinic, and a pediatric advocacy clinic. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, McCormack was a Cover Fellow at Yale Law School and taught in Yale’s clinical programs. Before that she worked as a staff attorney with the Office of the Appellate Defender and was a senior trial attorney with the Criminal Defense Division of the Legal Aid Society, both in New York City. McCormack has been published in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, the Tennessee Law Review, and the Windsor Access to Justice Journal. Her current clinical practice, as well as her research and scholarship, focuses on issues surrounding wrongful conviction, criminal penalties, and issues of clinical pedagogy. She earned her J.D. from New York University School of Law, where she was a Root-Tilden Scholar, and her B.A. with honors in political science and philosophy from Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut.
Professor Nina A. Mendelson teaches and conducts research in the areas of administrative law, environmental law, statutory interpretation, and the legislative process. Her work is published in prominent law reviews, including the Columbia Law Review, the New York University Law Review, and the Michigan Law Review. She currently serves as one of three U.S. special legal advisers to the NAFTA Commission on Environmental Cooperation and as a public member of the Administrative Conference of the United States. She is also a member scholar at the Center for Progressive Reform. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1999, Mendelson served for several years as an attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice's Environment and Natural Resources Division, litigating and advising other federal agencies on legislative matters and environmental policy initiatives. She also participated extensively in federal legislative negotiations. Mendelson earned her A.B. in economics, summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Harvard University. Her J.D. is from the Yale Law School, where she was an articles editor of the Yale Law Journal. Following law school, she clerked for Judge Pierre Leval in the Southern District of New York and for Judge John Walker Jr. of the Second Circuit. She also has worked for the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works and practiced law with Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe of Seattle.
William I. Miller, the Thomas G. Long Professor of Law, has been a member of the Michigan Law faculty since 1984. Originally, his research centered on saga Iceland, which he incorporated into the materials studied in his blood feuds class and his book, Bloodtaking and Peacemaking: Feud, Law, and Society in Saga Iceland (1990). He also has written about emotions, mostly unpleasant ones involving self-assessment, and select vices and virtues. Thus his books: The Mystery of Courage (2000), The Anatomy of Disgust (1997), Humiliation (1993), and Faking It (2003), the last of which deals with anxieties of role, identity, and posturings of authenticity. The Anatomy of Disgust was named the best book of 1997 in anthropology/sociology by the Association of American Publishers. In Eye for an Eye (2006), he returned to matters of revenge and retribution in an extended treatment of the law of the talion. Audun and the Polar Bear: Luck, Law, and Largesse in a Medieval Tale of Risky Business (2008) is an extended treatment of a superbly crafted short Icelandic tale. His most recent book, Losing It, about aging and decline will appear in the fall of 2011. Miller earned his B.A. from the University of Wisconsin and received both a Ph.D. in English and a J.D. from Yale. He also has been a visiting professor at Yale, the University of Chicago, the University of Bergen, the University of Tel Aviv, and Harvard, and in 2008, was the Carnegie Centenary Trust Professor at the University of St. Andrews.
Professor David Moran, '91, along with Professor Bridget McCormack, launched the Michigan Innocence Clinic in January 2009 to litigate claims of actual innocence by prisoners in cases where DNA evidence is not available. In its first 20 months, the clinic's work resulted in the exoneration of three men and one woman after a total of nearly 30 years of wrongful incarceration. In addition to his role as codirector of the clinic, Moran teaches courses in criminal law and criminal procedure. He has argued five times before the U.S. Supreme Court, and among his most notable cases is Halbert v. Michigan, in which the Supreme Court struck down a Michigan law that denied appellate counsel to assist indigent criminal defendants who wished to challenge their sentences after pleading guilty.

Moran earned his B.S. in physics from the University of Michigan; a B.A., M.A., and C.A.S. in mathematics from Cambridge University; an M.S. in theoretical physics from Cornell University; and a J.D., magna cum laude, from Michigan Law. He clerked for the Hon. Ralph B. Guy Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, then served for eight years as an assistant defender at the State Appellate Defender Office in Detroit. Prior to joining Michigan Law in 2008, he was an associate professor and the associate dean for academic affairs at Wayne State University Law School. In 2010, Michigan Lawyers Weekly named Moran "Michigan Lawyer of the Year."
Professor Julian Davis Mortenson teaches constitutional law, transnational law, and national security law. His research focuses on issues of structure and process in the developing network of international tribunals, and on the application of constitutional norms in the national security context. Mortenson was one of the principal drafters of the merits briefs in the landmark case of Boumediene v. Bush, in which the U.S. Supreme Court recognized the right of Guantanamo detainees to petition for a writ of habeas corpus. He also represented a group of discharged military service members in Cook v. Gates, the first post-Lawrence challenge to the "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" law. Mortenson's work has appeared or is forthcoming in the Chicago Law Review, the Harvard International Law Journal, the Iowa Law Review, and Slate.com, among other publications. He clerked for Justice David H. Souter of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III of the Fourth Circuit, and worked in the office of President Theodor Meron at the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Mortenson was salutatorian at Stanford Law School and received an A.B. in history, summa cum laude, from Harvard College.

DEGREES

A.B., Harvard; J.D., Stanford
Bill Novak

Professor Bill Novak, an award-winning legal scholar and historian, joined the Law School faculty in fall 2009. Novak came from the University of Chicago, where he had been an associate professor of history, a founding member of the university's Human Rights Program and Law, Letters, and Society Program, and director of its Center for Comparative Legal History. Since 2000, Novak has been a research professor with the American Bar Foundation. In 1996, he published The People's Welfare: Law and Regulation in Nineteenth-Century America, which won the American Historical Association's Littleton-Griswold Prize and was named Best Book in the History of Law and Society. A specialist on the legal, political, and intellectual history of the United States, Novak earned his Ph.D. in the history of American civilization from Brandeis University in 1991. He was a visiting faculty member at Michigan Law during fall 2007, when he taught courses in U.S. legal history and legislation. Novak is at work on The People's Government: Law and the Creation of the Modern American State, a study of the transformation in American liberal governance around the turn of the twentieth century.
Edward A. Parson is the Joseph L. Sax Collegiate Professor of Law and Professor of Natural Resources and Environment. His interests include environmental policy, particularly its international dimensions; the political economy of regulation; the role of science and technology in law, policy, and regulation; and the analysis of negotiations, collective decisions, and conflicts. The second edition of Parson's acclaimed book with coauthor A. E. Dessler, The Science and Politics of Global Climate Change, appeared in 2010. His previous book, Protecting the Ozone Layer: Science and Strategy, won the 2004 Harold and Margaret Sprout Award of the International Studies Association. His articles have appeared in the journals Science, Nature, Climatic Change, the Journal of Economic Literature, Issues in Science and Technology, and the Annual Review of Energy and the Environment. Parson holds degrees in physics (Toronto) and management science (British Columbia) as well as a Ph.D. in public policy from Harvard University. Formerly a professional classical musician, he has worked for the U.S. Congress Office of Technology Assessment, the Privy Council Office of Canada, and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. In addition, he has led and served on many advisory bodies on environment and climate policy, including the U.S. National Assessment of Impacts of Climate Change and the National Academy Panel on "America's Climate Choices."
Sallyanne Payton, the William W. Cook Professor of Law, came to Michigan Law in 1976 from Washington, D.C., where she was chief counsel for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation. Previously, she served as staff assistant to the president on the Domestic Policy Council staff.

In the private sector, she practiced law with Covington & Burling. Payton's industry specialty is health law, and she has been active in the effort to reform federal health care financing and regulation. She currently teaches administrative law and has served as a public member and senior fellow of the Administrative Conference of the United States as well as chair of the Administrative Law Section of the Association of American Law Schools. Payton holds both B.A. and LL.B. degrees from Stanford University. She is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and a member of the National Academy of Social Insurance.
Professor John A.E. Pottow is an internationally recognized expert in the field of bankruptcy and commercial law. A frequently invited lecturer, he has presented his works at academic conferences around the world and has testified on his research before Congress. In addition, Pottow provides commentary for international media outlets such as NPR, CNBC, CNN, C-SPAN, and the BBC. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty in 2003, Pottow worked at several bankruptcy firms, including Weil, Gotshal and Manges of New York and the former Hill & Barlow of Boston. His practice focused on debtor representation in complex Chapter 11 restructurings. He also was an active pro bono litigator whose cases included representing a gender-based asylum seeker from Afghanistan in U.S. Immigration Court and a small bankruptcy party before the U.S. Supreme Court. Pottow holds an A.B. in psychology, summa cum laude, from Harvard College and a J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School. Pottow clerked for the Rt. Hon. Beverley McLachlin, Chief Justice of Canada, and the Hon. Guido Calabresi, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. He is licensed as a barrister and solicitor in Ontario and as an attorney in Massachusetts. In 2005, he received the L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching.

DEGREES
A.B., J.D., Harvard

John A.E. Pottow
Professor J.J. Prescott’s research interests include criminal law, sentencing law and reform, employment law, and torts. Much of his work is empirical in focus. His current projects include an examination of the effects of sex offender registration and notification laws on the frequency and incidence of sex crimes, an empirical evaluation of the effects of prosecutor race and sex on charging and sentencing outcomes using a unique data set from New Orleans, a study of the socio-economic consequences of criminal record expungement using micro-level data from Michigan, and a paper that develops a theoretical model to explain the use of high-low agreements in civil litigation and then tests the model’s predictions using detailed insurance data. Prescott earned his J.D., magna cum laude, in 2002 from Harvard Law School, where he was the Treasurer (Vol. 115) and an editor of the Harvard Law Review. After clerking for Judge Merrick B. Garland of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, he went on to earn a Ph.D. in economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 2006.
Professor Eve Brensike Primus, '01, teaches criminal law, criminal procedure, and habeas corpus, and writes about structural reform in the criminal justice system. Before joining the Michigan Law faculty, she was an attorney in the Maryland Office of the Public Defender, where she worked both as a trial attorney and as an appellate litigator, appearing several times before the state's highest court. She also has participated in the lawmakers' process, giving legislative testimony and helping to draft proposed legislation on criminal justice issues. Brensike Primus holds a B.A., magna cum laude, from Brown University and a J.D., summa cum laude, from Michigan Law. In law school, she was articles editor of the Michigan Law Review, a board member for the Henry M. Campbell Moot Court Competition, and the winner of the Henry M. Bates Memorial Scholarship Award, the Law School's highest honor. She won Michigan Law's L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2009. Prior to law school, Brensike Primus worked as a criminal investigator for the Public Defender Service in Washington, D.C. After law school, she clerked for the Hon. Stephen Reinhardt of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.
Professor Richard Primus teaches the law, theory, and history of the U.S. Constitution. In the landmark 2009 U.S. Supreme Court case Ricci v. DeStefano, justices in both the majority and the dissent cited his work. In 2008, he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for his work on the relationship between history and constitutional interpretation. Primus graduated from Harvard College with an A.B., summa cum laude, in social studies. He then earned a D.Phil. in politics from Oxford University, where he was a Rhodes Scholar and the Jowett Senior Scholar at Balliol College. After studying law at Yale, Primus clerked for Judge Guido Calabresi of the Second Circuit and for Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. He then practiced law at the Washington, D.C., office of Jenner & Block before joining the Michigan Law faculty in 2001. He has taught as a visiting professor at Columbia Law School, New York University School of Law, and the University of Tokyo.
Adam C. Pritchard, the Frances and George Skestos Professor of Law, teaches corporate and securities law. His research focuses on securities class actions, securities arbitration, and the history of securities law in the U.S. Supreme Court. He is the author of Securities Regulation: Cases and Analysis and Securities Regulation: Essentials (both co-edited with Stephen J. Choi). In addition, his articles have appeared in the Journal of Legal Studies, the Journal of Empirical Legal Studies, the Journal of Finance, the Journal of Law, and Economics & Organization, along with various law reviews. Pritchard has been a visiting professor at the Northwestern University School of Law, the Georgetown University Law Center, and the University of Iowa School of Law. He holds B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Virginia, as well as an M.P.P. from the Harris School of Public Policy at the University of Chicago. After graduation, he clerked for Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and served as a Bristow Fellow in the Office of the Solicitor General at the U.S. Department of Justice. After working in private practice, he served as senior counsel in the Office of the General Counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission.
Margaret Jane Radin, the Henry King Ransom Professor of Law, teaches courses about contracts, Internet commerce, and patents, as well as courses and seminars dealing with property theory, the interaction between property and contracts, and the evolution of property and contracts in the digital era. She is the author of two books exploring the problems of propertization, Contested Commodities (Harvard University Press, 1996) and Reinterpreting Property (University of Chicago Press, 1993), and coauthor of a casebook, Internet Commerce: the Emerging Legal Framework, Second Edition (Foundation Press, 2005). Radin has taught at the University of Southern California and Stanford University, and has been a visiting professor at Harvard University, University of California, Berkeley (Boalt Hall), and New York University. During 2006-2007, she was the inaugural Microsoft Fellow in Law and Public Affairs at Princeton University, where she developed a course on patent law and innovation policy for engineers and public policy students. In 2008, she became a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Radin received her A.B. from Stanford, where she majored in music, and her M.F.A. in music history from Brandeis University. She was advanced to candidacy for the Ph.D. in musicology at UC Berkeley before she changed her career path to law and received her J.D. from the University of Southern California in 1976. She remains an avid amateur flutist.
Steven R. Ratner, the Bruno Simma Collegiate Professor of Law, came to Michigan Law in 2004 from the University of Texas School of Law. His teaching and research focuses on public international law and on a range of challenges facing governments and international institutions since the Cold War, including ethnic conflict, border disputes, counter-terrorism strategies, corporate and state duties regarding foreign investment, and accountability for human rights violations. Ratner has written and lectured extensively on the law of war, and is also interested in the intersection of international law and moral philosophy. From 1998 to 1999, he was a member of the UN Secretary-General’s Group of Experts considering options for bringing the Khmer Rouge to justice, and in 2010-2011, he is serving on the Secretary-General’s Panel of Experts on accountability related to the Sri Lankan civil war. From 2008 to 2009, he worked at the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva. He is currently serving on the State Department’s Advisory Committee on International Law and has advised governments, NGOs, and international organizations on a range of issues. A member of the board of editors of the American Journal of International Law from 1998 to 2008, Ratner holds a J.D. from Yale, an M.A. (diplôme) from the Institut Universitaire de Hautes Etudes Internationales (Geneva), and an A.B. from Princeton University. He established and directs the Law School’s externship program in Geneva.
Donald H. Regan, the William W. Bishop Jr. Collegiate Professor of Law, holds a joint appointment in the Department of Philosophy. He teaches and writes on international trade law, particularly core issues such as the national treatment obligation and Article XX of the GATT; moral and political philosophy, with a special interest in the theory of the good; and constitutional law, concentrating on federalism issues. He has been a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 1998. His book, Utilitarianism and Co-operation, shared the Franklin J. Matchette Prize of the American Philosophical Association for 1979-1980. Regan is a graduate of Harvard University and the University of Virginia Law School. He also was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, where he earned a degree in economics, and he holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Michigan. Regan began his teaching career at Michigan in 1968. He has been a visiting professor at the University of California, Berkeley, the University of Virginia, and the University of Zagreb.
Professor Paul D. Reingold is director of the Michigan Law Civil Litigation Clinic. Prior to joining the Law School faculty in 1983, he served as a legal services attorney, specializing in cases against the state and federal governments. His primary interests include civil rights litigation, appellate practice, prisoners’ rights, and civil procedure. Reingold has taught trial advocacy, litigation ethics, negotiation, and clinical law, and is a past recipient of the L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching. He also has taught as a visiting professor of law in Japan and Spain, and as a visiting clinical professor at the Boston College Law School. He has served on the board of directors of the Clinical Law Section of the American Association of Law Schools and was a founding member of the editorial board of the Clinical Law Review. Reingold attended Gerry Spence’s Trial Lawyers College in Wyoming, and has been recognized as a fellow of the Michigan State Bar Foundation. He has chaired and is currently a member of the executive committee of Michigan’s Institute of Continuing Legal Education, and has trained to become a court-approved mediator for alternative dispute resolution. The State Bar of Michigan granted him its 2009 Champion of Justice Award for his work as a public interest lawyer. Reingold earned his B.A. from Amherst College and his J.D. from Boston University Law School.
An experienced trial lawyer, Professor Nicholas J. Rine has tried cases in a wide variety of state and federal courts and agencies. Since joining the clinical faculty in 1989, he has taught in the General Civil Clinic, the Child Advocacy Clinic, the Urban Communities Clinic, the Asylum Clinic, the Women and the Law Clinic, and the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic. He also has taught ethics and negotiation courses. In 2004, he developed a new course, Law and Development, which connects with students' volunteer work as interns in developing nations. In addition, he frequently provides training for new lawyers beginning practice in legal services programs. Rine directs the Law School's Cambodian Law and Development Program in which students from Michigan Law and other graduate programs work in Cambodia as interns with human rights NGOs and government ministries. He has worked in Cambodia as a consultant for a human rights NGO and has taught at the Royal University of Law and Economics and the Community Legal Education Center in Phnom Penh on a Fulbright grant. While a resident in Cambodia, he published a textbook on legal ethics in English and Khmer. Rine earned his bachelor's and law degrees from Wayne State University. He served as president of the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association from 1985 to 1986.
Vivek S. Sankaran, '01, is a clinical assistant professor of law in the Child Advocacy Law Clinic and director of the Detroit Center for Family Advocacy. His research and policy interests focus on improving outcomes for children in child abuse and neglect cases by empowering parents and strengthening due process protections in the child welfare system. Sankaran sits on the steering committee of the ABA National Project to Improve Representation for Parents Involved in the Child Welfare System and chairs the Michigan Court Improvement Project subcommittee on parent representation. He has authored scholarly pieces and practical resource guides to assist professionals working with parents in the system and regularly conducts national and statewide training on these issues. He also has been appointed by the Michigan Supreme Court to represent parents on appeals of termination of parental rights decisions. Sankaran earned his B.A., magna cum laude, from the College of William and Mary. He earned his J.D., cum laude, from Michigan Law, where he was an associate editor of the Michigan Law Review. After law school, he joined The Children's Law Center (CLC) as a Skadden Fellow and became a permanent staff attorney with the CLC in September 2003. Sankaran was named the 2004 Michigan Law School Public Interest Alumni of the Year and was certified as a child welfare specialist by the National Association of Counsel for Children in 2006.
David A. Santacroce teaches in the Clinical Law Program and the General Civil Clinic. His primary interest is impact litigation focusing on civil rights, particularly health care issues. Santacroce is the founder and president of the Center for the Study of Applied Legal Education (CSALE), a nonprofit corporation housed at the Law School. CSALE is dedicated to the empirical study of applied legal education and the promotion of related scholarship. Santacroce is also the president and founding member of Equal Justice America, a nonprofit corporation that provides grants to law students who volunteer to work with organizations providing civil legal services to the indigent. He is a past chair of the Association of American Law Schools Section on Clinical Legal Education and a former board member of the Clinical Legal Education Association. He is also a former senior staff attorney for the Sugar Law Center for Economic and Social Justice in Detroit. While there, he managed a programmatic workers’ rights campaign under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act in trial and appellate courts throughout the United States. Santacroce received an LL.M. from Columbia University School of Law, where he was named a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar; a J.D., cum laude, from Pace University School of Law, where he was managing editor of the Pace Law Review; and a B.A. from Connecticut College.
Professor Margo Schlanger is on leave to serve as the officer for civil rights and civil liberties at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, having been appointed by President Obama in January 2010. She brought her expertise in civil rights, prison reform, torts, and empirical legal studies to the Law School in fall 2009, where she also headed the Civil Rights Litigation Clearinghouse. Previously, she had been a professor at Washington University in St. Louis, and an assistant professor at Harvard University. She earned her J.D. from Yale in 1993. While there, she served as book reviews editor of the Yale Law Journal and received the Vinson Prize. She then served as law clerk for Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg of the U.S. Supreme Court from 1993 to 1995. From 1995 to 1998, she was a trial attorney in the U.S. Department of Justice Civil Rights Division, where she worked to remedy civil rights abuses by prison and police departments and earned two Division Special Achievement awards. Schlanger, a leading authority on prisons and inmate litigation, served on the Vera Institute's blue ribbon Commission on Safety and Abuse in America's Prisons; she worked as an advisor on the development of proposed national standards implementing the Prison Rape Elimination Act, and testified before the Prison Rape Elimination Commission. She also served as the reporter for the American Bar Association's revision of its Standards Governing the Legal Treatment of Prisoners, and as chair of the Association of American Law Schools Section on Law and the Social Sciences.
Carl E. Schneider, '79, the Chauncey Stillman Professor for Ethics, Morality, and the Practice of Law and Professor of Internal Medicine, teaches courses on law and medicine, property, and the sociology and ethics of the legal profession. In recent years he has written primarily in the field of law and bioethics. His scholarship criticizes the dominant bioethical paradigms, particularly as they are applied to subjects such as the relationship between doctor and patient, the use of advance directives, physician-assisted suicide, and human-subject research. His The Practice of Autonomy: Patients, Doctors, and Medical Decisions (Oxford University Press, 1998) is an example of that project. Schneider also is the coauthor of two casebooks. With Marsha Garrison, he wrote The Law of Bioethics: Individual Autonomy and Social Regulation, Second Edition (West, 2009), a pioneering casebook in its subject. With Margaret F. Brinig, he wrote An Invitation to Family Law, Third Edition (West, 2007), an innovative family-law casebook. He recently served as a member of the President's Bioethics Council and has been a visiting professor at Cambridge University, the University of Tokyo, Kyoto University, and the U.S. Air Force Academy.
Since joining the Law School in 1997, Professor Anne Schroth has been the principal faculty liaison to the Michigan Poverty Law Program, the state-supported legal services office operated jointly by Michigan Law and Legal Services of South Central Michigan. She has taught in a variety of clinical settings, including the Poverty Law Clinic, the Civil Clinic, and the Domestic Violence Clinic. Most recently, Schroth developed a new clinical course, the Pediatric Advocacy Clinic, in which students work in a medical/legal collaboration with pediatric health care providers to develop interdisciplinary strategies for improving the health outcomes of low-income children. She also has taught several non-clinical courses at the Law School, including the Domestic Violence Litigation Seminar and Access to Justice. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty, Schroth was a staff attorney with AYUDA in Washington, D.C., representing immigrant and refugee victims of domestic violence. She earned her B.A. from the University of Chicago, Phi Beta Kappa, and served as a student attorney and executive director of the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau while earning her J.D., cum laude, from Harvard Law School. After clerking for the Hon. Mary Johnson Lowe of the U.S. District Court of the Southern District of New York, she practiced as an associate with Bernabei & Katz in Washington, D.C.
Rebecca Scott, the Charles Gibson Distinguished University Professor of History and Professor of Law, teaches a seminar on the law in slavery and freedom as well as a course on civil rights and the boundaries of citizenship in historical perspective. Her book, Degrees of Freedom: Louisiana and Cuba after Slavery (Harvard University Press, 2005), received the Frederick Douglass Prize and the John Hope Franklin Prize. Among Scott’s recent articles are “Public Rights, Social Equality, and the Conceptual Roots of the Plessy Challenge,” Michigan Law Review 106 (2008); the coauthored essay “Rosalie of the Poulard Nation: Freedom, Law, and Dignity in the Era of the Haitian Revolution,” (in Garrigus and Morris, Assumed Identities, 2010); “She . . . Refuses to Deliver Up Herself as the Slave of Your Petitioner: Émigrés, Enslavement, and the 1808 Louisiana Digest of the Civil Laws,” Tulane European and Civil Law Forum 24 (2009); and “The Atlantic World and the Road to Plessy v. Ferguson,” the Journal of American History (2007). Scott received an A.B. from Radcliffe College, an M.Phil. in economic history from the London School of Economics, and a Ph.D. in history from Princeton University. She is a recent recipient of the Guggenheim Fellowship, a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a MacArthur Fellowship recipient.
Professor Gil Seinfeld teaches and writes in the areas of federal courts and jurisdiction. Since joining the faculty, Seinfeld's scholarly work has focused on the constitutional and statutory rules governing the jurisdiction of the lower federal courts. His work has been published in numerous law reviews including the Michigan Law Review, the University of Pennsylvania Law Review and the California Law Review. Prior to joining Michigan Law, Seinfeld was an associate at Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr in New York City, where he focused on appellate litigation. Before that, he served as a law clerk for Justice Antonin Scalia of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge Guido Calabresi of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. In 2006, Seinfeld received the Law School's L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching. He is admitted to practice in New York.
Professor Sonja B. Starr joined the Law School faculty in fall 2009 and teaches first-year criminal law, international criminal law, and a seminar on the collateral consequences of criminal convictions. Her research interests include the development of effective remedies for violations of criminal defendants’ rights, sentencing law and policy, and re-entry of ex-offenders. Her research methods include quantitative empirical assessment of the effects of criminal justice policies as well as analysis of legal theory and doctrine. Before coming to Michigan Law, Starr taught at the University of Maryland School of Law and spent two years at Harvard Law School as a Cimenko Fellow and Lecturer on Law. Starr has clerked for Judge Merrick Garland of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and for Judge Mohamed Shahabuddeen of the shared Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia in The Hague. Between these clerkships, she was an associate with Goldstein & Howe, PC, in Washington, D.C., a firm specializing in U.S. Supreme Court litigation. Starr earned her J.D. from Yale Law School, where she served as senior editor of the Yale Law Journal and was awarded the American Bar Association’s annual Ross Student Writing Prize. She received her A.B. from Harvard, summa cum laude.
Professor Kimberly Thomas's research, teaching, and practice concentrates on criminal law, especially on sentencing law and practice, juvenile justice, indigent persons accused of crimes, and prisoner re-entry into the community. She is a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Maryland and Harvard Law School, where she was editor-in-chief of the Civil Rights-Civil Liberties Law Review. Thomas clerked for Judge R. Guy Cole of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and served as a major trials attorney with the Defender Association of Philadelphia prior to joining the Law School faculty in 2003. During law school she worked for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, and spent time with Legal Aid of Cambodia and the Justice Committee of Parliament in Cape Town, South Africa. In addition to practicing law, she has worked as a newspaper reporter and a high school math teacher, and taught an undergraduate seminar in the economics department while she was at Harvard.
Dana A. Thompson, '99, is a clinical assistant professor of law and teaches in the Urban Communities Clinic, where she represents small businesses and community-based organizations. Prior to joining Michigan Law, Thompson founded and taught Wayne State University Law School's Small Business Enterprises and Nonprofit Corporations Clinic. She has particular expertise in corporate, nonprofit, and commercial real estate law. She is a contributing author to Building Healthy Communities: A Guide to Community Economic Development for Advocates, Lawyers and Policymakers, recently published by the ABA's Forum on Affordable Housing and Community Development Law. Prior to entering academia, Thompson practiced at Morrison and Foerster, LLP in San Francisco, then at Miller, Starr and Regalia, where she specialized in commercial real estate and corporate law. She then practiced with the Nature Conservancy, where she represented the organization on land conservation transactions. Thompson sits on former Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm’s Emerging Small Business Leaders and Entrepreneurial Council. She also sits on the Board of Directors of Community Legal Resources, on the Finance Committee of Habitat for Humanity Detroit, and on the Detroit Regional Chamber’s Small Business Advisory Council. Thompson received her J.D. from Michigan Law, where she was an editor of the Michigan Law Review, and her A.B. from Bryn Mawr College.
Frank Vandervort is a clinical assistant professor of law whose primary interests include child protection, juvenile delinquency, and interdisciplinary practice. Since 1997, he has served as legal consultant to the University of Michigan School of Social Work's Family Assessment Clinic. He is currently working as a consultant to the National Quality Improvement Center on the Representation of Children in the Child Welfare System and as a consultant to the Trauma Informed Child Welfare Systems federal training grant. Vandervort received a B.A. from Michigan State University and a J.D. from Wayne State University Law School.
DEGREES
B.B.A., University of Cincinnati; J.D., University of Michigan;
D.Phil., Oxford

Lawrence W. Waggoner, '63, the Lewis M. Simes Professor of Law, is active in law reform with both the Uniform Law Commission and the American Law Institute in the field of wills, trusts, and future interests. As the director of research and chief reporter for the Joint Editorial Board for Uniform Trust and Estate Acts, he was the principal drafter of the Uniform Probate Code revisions completed in the 1990s. He recently completed another round of revisions dealing mainly with the treatment of children of assisted reproduction. Waggoner continues as director of research for the Joint Editorial Board and also serves as reporter for the Restatement (Third) of Property (Wills and Other Donative Transfers), an ongoing project. Volume one of the new Restatement was published in 1999, and volume two appeared in 2003. The third and final volume is nearing completion. He is also the coauthor of a casebook and several articles in these fields.

Waggoner graduated from the University of Cincinnati and Michigan Law. As a Fulbright Scholar, he earned a doctor of philosophy degree from Oxford University. He practiced law with Cravath, Swaine & Moore in New York City, and served as a captain in the U.S. Army from 1966 to 1968. He came to Michigan Law from the University of Virginia in 1974.
Mark D. West, the Nippon Life Professor of Law and associate dean for academic affairs, is director of the Japanese Legal Studies Program. He is currently researching the ways in which common concepts from Japanese social psychology appear in Japanese case law. West is the author of Lovesick Japan: Sex • Marriage • Romance • Law (forthcoming 2011), Secrets, Sex, and Spectacle: The Rules of Scandal in Japan and the United States (2006), Law in Everyday Japan: Sex, Sumo, Suicide, and Statutes (2005), and coauthor of The Japanese Legal System (2006) and Economic Organizations and Corporate Governance in Japan (2004). He has studied and taught at the University of Tokyo and Kyoto University, and has been a Fulbright Research Scholar, an Abe Fellow, and a fellow of the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science. From 2003 to 2008, he was director of the University of Michigan’s Center for Japanese Studies. West earned his J.D. from Columbia University School of Law, where he was notes and comments editor of the Columbia Law Review. He clerked for the Hon. Eugene H. Nickerson of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York, and practiced in the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in New York and Tokyo.
DEGREES
B.A., Amherst College; J.D., University of Michigan

James J. White, '62, the Robert A. Sullivan Professor of Law, has written on many aspects of commercial law. His book, Uniform Commercial Code (with Summers), is considered to be the most widely recognized treatise on the subject. He is also the author of several casebooks on commercial, bankruptcy, and contracts law. White has served as the reporter for the Revision of Article 5 of the Uniform Commercial Code and is a Commissioner on Uniform Laws from Michigan. He also has served on several American Law Institute and NCCUSL committees dealing with revisions to the Uniform Commercial Code. He is the recipient of Michigan Law’s L. Hart Wright Award for Excellence in Teaching for the 2001-2002 academic year, and the Homer Kripke Achievement Award, given by the American College of Commercial Finance Lawyers. White earned his B.A., magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from Amherst College and his J.D., Order of the Coif, from Michigan Law. He practiced privately in Los Angeles before beginning his academic career at the Law School in 1964.
Christina B. Whitman

Christina B. Whitman, '74, is the Francis A. Allen Collegiate Professor of Law and a professor of women's studies at the University of Michigan. She also serves as the University's vice provost for academic and faculty affairs. Her research interests include federal courts, constitutional litigation, torts, and feminist jurisprudence, with a particular focus on questions of personal and institutional responsibility. From 1997 to 2001, Whitman served as associate dean for academic affairs for the Law School. From 2005 to 2007, she was special counsel to the provost for the policy on conflicts of interest/conflicts of commitment. A former editor-in-chief of the Michigan Law Review, Whitman holds three degrees from the University of Michigan, including a law degree and a graduate degree in Chinese literature. She joined the Michigan Law faculty in 1976, after serving as law clerk to Judge Harold Leventhal of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and to Justice Lewis Powell of the U.S. Supreme Court.

DEGREES
A.B., M.A., J.D., University of Michigan
“Michigan Law’s leadership in international legal studies was established soon after our inception in 1859. In the ensuing century, we’ve built a curriculum with extensive international components; established multiple international centers and programs; demonstrated excellence in our focus on the EU, China, Japan, India, and the WTO; affiliated with overseas law schools and programs; attracted foreign students and renowned scholars, jurists, and practitioners; continue to send students to numerous places around the globe for externships and pro bono legal services; became the world center for refugee and asylum law; and were the first law school to require a course in transnational law. Not bad for one hundred and fifty years.”

Evan Caminker
Dean
Branch Rickey Collegiate Professor of Law
University of Michigan Law School
Professor Susanne Baer, LL.M. '93, joined Michigan Law’s faculty as a William W. Cook Global Law Professor in winter 2010. She is a professor of public law and gender studies with the Law Faculty at Humboldt University in Berlin and its dean of academic affairs. She has served as vice president for academic and international affairs at Humboldt, as well as director of the Centre for Transdisciplinary Gender Studies and director of the GenderCompetenceCentre. She also directs the Law and Society Institute Berlin. She has taught in Bielefeld, Erfurt, Linz, Fiesole, and Toronto, and is a visiting faculty member at CEU Budapest. Her research areas include socio-cultural legal studies, gender studies, law against discrimination, and comparative constitutional law. She recently was elected to join Germany’s Federal Constitutional Court for a 12-year term.
Christine Chinkin, William W. Cook Global Law Professor, is a professor of international law at the London School of Economics and Political Science at the University of London, and an internationally respected scholar of public international law, alternative dispute resolution, international criminal law, human rights, especially women's human rights, and the intersection of feminist jurisprudence and international law. She is the author of Third Parties in International Law (OUP, 1993) and coauthor of Dispute Resolution in Australia (Butterworths, 2nd edition, 2002), The Boundaries of International Law: A Feminist Analysis (MUP, 2000), which was awarded the Certificate of Merit of the American Society of International Law, and The Making of International Law (OUP, 2007). In 2006, she received the Goler T. Butcher Medal from the American Society of International Law for her service to human rights. Chinkin received an LL.B. with honors and an LL.M. from the University of London; a second LL.M. from Yale University; and a Ph.D. from the University of Sydney. Formerly dean of the law faculty at the University of Southampton, she has lectured on international law and international human rights at the National University of Singapore, Hong Kong University Law School, the International Law Institute of China, the European University Institute, Columbia University, and the University of Southampton. She is a member of the Kosovo Human Rights Advisory Panel.
William W. Cook Global Law Professor

Damien Geradin is a professor of competition law and economics at Tilburg University in The Netherlands. His areas of research include antitrust with a particular focus on high-technology industries and intellectual property law. Geradin has held visiting professorships at Columbia Law School, Harvard Law School, and UCLA School of Law. He is the co-editor-in-chief of the Journal of Competition Law and Economics and has authored or edited 15 books and published more than 60 legal and economic papers.

His most recent book is Global Antitrust Law and Economics, coauthored with Professor Einer Elhauge of Harvard Law School. As a practitioner, Geradin has been involved in a number of major antitrust cases, including the abuse of dominance cases and mergers. He also has advised a number of competition and regulatory authorities and has been involved in international arbitrations. He holds an LL.M. from King’s College London and a Ph.D. from Cambridge University. He was a Fulbright Research Scholar at Yale Law School.

DEGREES

LL.B., University of Liege; LL.M., King’s College London; Ph.D., Cambridge University
J. Christopher McCrudden, William W. Cook Global Law Professor, is a professor of human rights law at the University of Oxford; a fellow and tutor in law at Lincoln College, Oxford; and a practicing barrister-at-law (Gray’s Inn). Specializing in human rights, he concentrates on issues of equality and discrimination as well as the relationship between international economic law and human rights. At Michigan Law, McCrudden teaches in the areas of international, European, and comparative human rights. He is the author of Buying Social Justice (Oxford University Press, 2007), a book about the relationship between public procurement and equality, for which he was awarded a Certificate of Merit by the American Society of International Law in 2008. He serves on the editorial boards of several journals, including the Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, the International Journal of Discrimination and the Law, the Journal of International Economic Law, and is co-editor of the Law in Context series. He serves on the European Commission’s Expert Network on the Application of the Gender Equality Directives and is a scientific director of the European Commission’s network of experts on nondiscrimination. McCrudden holds an LL.B. from Queen’s University, Belfast, an LL.M. from Yale, and a D.Phil. from Oxford. In addition, Queen’s University, Belfast, awarded him an honorary LL.D. in 2006. He was elected a fellow of the British Academy in 2008.
William W. Cook Global Law Professor Bruno Simma, a judge on the International Court of Justice, first came to the Law School in 1986, as a visitor from the University of Munich Faculty of Law, where he had taught since 1972. From 1987 to 1992, he held a joint Munich-Ann Arbor faculty appointment while also serving on the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (1987 to 1996). In 1995, Simma returned as a visiting professor to the Law School; in the summer of the same year he had served as a lecturer at The Hague Academy of International Law. Since 1997, he has been a member of the Law School's Affiliated Overseas Faculty, more recently as William W. Cook Global Law Professor. Simma has served as dean of the Munich Faculty of Law and, from 1997 to 2002, as a member of the UN International Law Commission. He also has been co-agent and counsel in cases before the International Court of Justice and an arbitrator both in inter-state and investor-state arbitrations, as well as served as a member of the Court of Arbitration in Sports. Simma is cofounder and co-editor of the European Journal of International Law and cofounder of the European Society of International Law. In 2003, he was elected an associé of the prestigious Institut de Droit International. In the summer of 2009, Simma offered the General Course in Public International Law at The Hague Academy of International Law.
"We take great pride in the Legal Practice Program and the training it provides our students to succeed in the legal profession. Each year our Legal Practice professors receive messages from former students thanking them for the excellent preparation the Legal Practice course gave them for the practice of law. Employers also tell us they are impressed with the professionalism and outstanding skills of Michigan students.

Philip Frost, '73
Clinical Professor of Law
Director, Legal Practice Program
University of Michigan Law School
Professor Nicole Appleberry, '94, teaches in the Low Income Taxpayer Clinic, the Mediation I Clinic and the Mediation II Clinic. She also teaches animal law and has taught in the International Taxpayer Clinic. Her research and teaching interests focus on the legal issues involved when vulnerable populations are caught up in systems beyond their experience and meaningful control—thus the intersection of tax law with other specialties such as poverty, disability, immigration, and domestic violence law, the empowerment of adversaries through mediation, and the developing legal status of animals. Appleberry was an assistant prosecuting attorney in Livingston County, Michigan, from 1995 to 1999, focusing on juvenile delinquency, domestic violence, and child abuse and neglect. She is currently "of counsel" at Ferguson & Widmayer, P.C. in Ann Arbor, specializing in tax-related matters. She is a Washtenaw County-approved civil mediator and served as co-chair of the Taxation Section of the Washtenaw County Bar Association. She earned her B.A. in English, with honors, in 1988 and her J.D. in 1994 from the University of Michigan, and her LL.M. in taxation in 2000 from Wayne State University.

DEGREES
B.A., J.D., University of Michigan; LL.M., Wayne State University
Professor Deborah Burand is serving as vice president and general counsel to the Overseas Private Investment Corporation under the Obama Administration. She is on leave from her role as the founding director of the Law School’s International Transactions Clinic. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty, Burand worked for seven years in the microfinance sector, most recently as executive vice president of strategic services at Grameen Foundation, a global microfinance network. Earlier in her career, she worked as a senior attorney in the international banking section of the Federal Reserve Board’s legal division, and at the U.S. Treasury Department, first as senior attorney/adviser for international monetary matters and later as senior adviser for international financial matters. She also spent nearly seven years as an international corporate attorney at Shearman & Sterling in New York. Burand was the co-topic leader for finance for the 2009 Clinton Global Initiative and is a member of the bars of New York and the District of Columbia. In 1993-1994, she was an international affairs fellow of the Council on Foreign Relations and is currently a member of the Council. She earned her B.A., cum laude, from Depauw University and a joint graduate degree, J.D./M.S.F.S. with honors, from Georgetown University.
Rachel Croskery-Roberts

Professor Rachel Croskery-Roberts, '00, is the associate director of the Legal Practice Program, which she joined in 2002. She also has worked as an associate in the Labor and Employment Department at Baker Botts in Dallas, and clerked for the Hon. Janis Graham Jack of the U.S. District Court, Southern District of Texas. She has presented on various topics at academic conferences in the U.S. and abroad. Her article on the theory and practice of using teaching assistants, coauthored with Professor Ted Becker, appeared in the Journal of the Legal Writing Institute, and she is currently working on a book on employment discrimination for Aspen Publishers. She is a past-chair of the AALS Section on Legal Writing, Reasoning, and Research, and is chair-elect of the Teaching Methods section. She is an editor of the peer-edited Journal of the Legal Writing Institute, and a member of the State Bar of Texas and the American Bar Association. She earned her B.A., summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, from the University of Oklahoma and received her J.D., magna cum laude and Order of the Coif, from Michigan Law, graduating in the top 5 percent of her class. While in law school, she served on the Michigan Journal of International Law and the Michigan Journal of Gender and Law.

DEGREES
B.A., University of Oklahoma; J.D., University of Michigan
Before joining the Legal Practice Program in August 2005 as a clinical assistant professor, Paul H. Falon, '83, worked in private practice for more than 20 years. As a partner at Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson in Washington, D.C., and New York, and, before that, at Manatt, Phelps & Phillips in Washington, he represented insurers, reinsurers, agents and brokers, Internet markets, investment banks and other financial institutions, holding companies, creditors, commercial insurers, nonprofit organizations, state insurance regulators, and other participants in the insurance industry in a broad variety of regulatory, corporate, financial, litigation, administrative, and legislative matters. Falon is admitted to practice in New York, the District of Columbia, and before the U.S. Supreme Court and other federal courts. He is a member of the editorial review board of The Journal of Insurance Regulation. He received his B.A., M.A., and J.D. from the University of Michigan. In addition to classes in legal practice, he has taught a mini-seminar on insurance issues for corporate lawyers.
Before joining Michigan Law in 2001, Professor Mark K. Osbeck, '86, litigated sophisticated commercial cases for a number of years, first in Washington, D.C., and later in Denver, Colorado. Formerly a partner with two major law firms, he has extensive trial and deposition experience and has argued before a number of state and federal courts, including the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Osbeck is the author of the recently published book Impeccable Research: A Concise Guide to Mastering Legal Research Skills (West, 2010). His research interests include legal writing, legal research, and tort reform. He received an A.B., with high distinction, from the University of Michigan, an M.A. in philosophy from the Johns Hopkins University, and a J.D., cum laude, from Michigan Law. While attending Johns Hopkins, he received a University Fellowship, the top departmental award. In law school, he was awarded certificates of merit for legal writing and political philosophy, and was a note editor for the Michigan Journal of Law Reform. Following his law school graduation, he served as a judicial clerk for Michigan Supreme Court Justice Charles L. Levin.
Timothy Pinto, '97, is a clinical assistant professor in the Legal Practice Program. He earned his B.A., cum laude, from Williams College and his J.D., cum laude, from Michigan Law, where he served as associate editor of the Michigan Law Review. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, Pinto clerked for one year for the Hon. Roderick R. McKelvie of the U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware; spent four years as a litigation associate at Winston & Strawn in Chicago; and spent four years as a staff attorney and four years as general counsel for the U.S. Soccer Federation in Chicago.
An experienced mediator and commercial arbitrator, Professor Thomas H. Seymour has practiced corporate and bankruptcy law at Csaplar & Bok in Boston. He also has served as editor of the American Bar Association's Dispute Resolution Magazine and was a law faculty scholar at the Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution at Pepperdine University School of Law. Seymour has been a continuing legal education presenter on legal practice and has served as editor of Legal Writing: the Journal of the Legal Writing Institute. His published works include articles on scope-of-employment standards, the proper use of legal citations, and the treatment of student loans in bankruptcy. Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1996 as a clinical assistant professor within the Legal Practice Program, he was a member of the faculties of the Harvard Business School, Boston College Law School, and Suffolk University Law School. Seymour holds a B.A. from the University of Nebraska, an M.A. from Simon Fraser University, and a J.D. from Harvard Law School.
Beth H. Wilensky

Beth Hirschfelder Wilensky is a clinical assistant professor in the Legal Practice Program. Prior to joining the faculty, she practiced law for five years in the litigation section at Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld LLP in Washington, D.C. Her practice consisted primarily of appellate work and administrative law matters, and included appeals before the D.C. Circuit and the Federal Circuit. Actively engaged in pro bono work, she served as lead trial counsel in a successful four-day termination of a parental rights case in D.C. Superior Court. Wilensky earned her B.A., magna cum laude, from the University of Pennsylvania, where she was a Benjamin Franklin Scholar. She received her J.D., cum laude, from Harvard Law School, where she served as articles editor of the Harvard Journal on Legislation. While in law school, she worked as a teaching fellow in Harvard College and was among the top 15 percent of teaching fellows recognized with the Harvard University Certificate of Distinction in Teaching.
“In addition to our full-time professors, Michigan Law's diverse faculty includes professors from practice and faculty fellows in business law and public interest/public service – all seasoned legal practitioners who come to the Law School from positions at the top of their fields – as well as other faculty whose expertise enhances their interactions with Michigan Law students.

Professors from Practice, Fellows, and Affiliated Faculty

They teach courses of special interest to students, offer career mentoring, and interact with students in small settings designed to encourage conversations about various career paths.”

MARK D. WEST
Associate Dean for Academic Affairs
Nippon Life Professor of Law
University of Michigan Law School
DEGREES
B.A., University of Pennsylvania; J.D., University of Michigan

Barry A. Adelman

As a senior partner at Friedman Kaplan Seiler & Adelman LLP in New York, Professor Barry A. Adelman, '69, represents and counsels domestic and international clients in a broad range of activities, including mergers and acquisitions, issuances of equity and debt securities (both public and private placements), formation and structuring of domestic and international corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies and joint ventures, project financings, secured loan transactions and agreements for the acquisition, construction, and maintenance of communications systems. He has represented various clients in the formation of joint ventures for telecommunications transactions (and the subsequent acquisitions and dispositions of telecommunications systems) in Eastern and Western Europe, Asia, Africa, Iceland, South America, and the Caribbean. He also represents and advises individuals and families in connection with business and financial transactions as well as personal matters. Adelman graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and received his law degree from Michigan Law.
Before joining the Law School faculty as a clinical assistant professor in 2000, Ted Becker was a litigator with Dickinson Wright in Lansing, Michigan, specializing in telecommunications arbitrations and other administrative agency proceedings. He also has substantial appellate experience in general corporate litigation, both with Dickinson Wright and as a sole practitioner. He previously was an adjunct professor at Thomas M. Cooley Law School, teaching an upper-level course in litigation skills, including discovery and motion practice, as well as the practical business aspects of law firm operation. Becker is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of the Legal Writing Institute. He has authored or coauthored articles in the Duquesne Law Review, Legal Writing, the Second Draft, and the Michigan Defense Quarterly, and has presented several times at academic legal writing conferences. He received his B.A. from the University of Michigan and his J.D., summa cum laude, from the University of Illinois College of Law, where he was a member of the Order of the Coif and an articles editor of the University of Illinois Law Review.

DEGREES

B.A., University of Michigan; J.D., University of Illinois
Professor Howard Bromberg teaches in the Legal Practice Program, where he also taught from 1996 to 2000. Prior to returning to Michigan Law, he was associate professor of law and assistant dean of clinical and professional skills programs at the Ave Maria School of Law in Ann Arbor. He has published numerous articles and entries on subjects in law, legal history, and biography, and edited the recently published three-volume Great Lives From History: The Incredibly Wealthy. From 2001 to 2003, he was a visiting professor at Harvard Law School, where he helped establish the new First-Year Lawyering Program and served as its associate director. From 2008 to 2010, he designed and directed the legal writing program at the newly-created Peking University School of Transnational Law, where he also was a visiting professor. In addition, he has taught at Chicago and Stanford law schools. Before entering the academy, Bromberg practiced law as an assistant district attorney in the Appeals Bureau of the New York County District Attorney’s Office and as legislative counsel to Congressman Thomas Petri of Wisconsin. Bromberg received his B.A and J.D. degrees from Harvard Law School and his J.S.M. degree from Stanford Law School. He serves on the advisory committee of the State of Michigan Moot Court Competition, which he chaired in 2005-2006 when he directed the annual competition.
Professor Bridgette Carr, '02, directs the Human Trafficking Clinic and serves as the externship faculty supervisor for all domestic and South African externship placements. Her research and teaching interests focus on human trafficking, immigration, and human rights, and she is a member of the Michigan Human Trafficking Taskforce. Last fall, the Human Trafficking Clinic received a $300,000 grant from the U.S. Department of State to open a human trafficking clinic in Zacatecas, Mexico. In March 2010, Carr traveled to Alexandria University to assist with the opening of Egypt's first law school legal clinic, which focuses on human trafficking and domestic violence. She met with the university's law students, professors and administrators to train them in teaching methods used by U.S. clinical programs. Carr received her B.A., cum laude, from the University of Notre Dame and earned her J.D., cum laude, from Michigan Law. During law school, she was a Michigan refugee and asylum law fellow with Amnesty International. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, she was an associate clinical professor at the University of Notre Dame Law School, where she led the Immigrant Rights Project. In 2008, she was awarded a Marshall Memorial Fellowship to study human trafficking issues in Europe.

DEGREES
B.A., Notre Dame; J.D., University of Michigan
DEGREES
A.B., J.D., University of Michigan

Rachel E. Deming, '82, is director of the International Transactions Clinic. Her research and advocacy interests include cross-border transactions, sustainable development, corporate social responsibility, environmental finance, and dispute resolution. Deming began her career as an associate at Shearman & Sterling working on international banking issues, and cross-border merger and acquisition litigation. She left to become in-house environmental counsel for a Swiss-based global manufacturing company, where she negotiated several consent agreements involving the cleanup of major Superfund sites and also managed the resolution of high-profile tort claims against the company outside the courtroom. Recognizing the value of alternative dispute resolution, Deming returned to private practice in 2007 to become a mediator. She was appointed by the administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to its Environmental Financial Advisory Board in 2005 and was recently reappointed for another term. She also was involved in the establishment of an environmental dispute resolution center at Pace Law School, the Kheel Center for the Resolution of Environmental Interest Disputes, and received the Founder's Award for her work in 2009 from Theodore W. Kheel. She received her A.B. in Russian studies and history, cum laude with honors, from the University of Michigan in 1977, and her J.D. from Michigan Law in 1982. She completed a post-graduate fellowship with the International Research & Exchanges Board at Moscow State University.
Professor Timothy L. Dickinson, '79, is a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP, where his practice is devoted primarily to international commercial matters. Previously, he practiced with Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, also of Washington, D.C., and for two years was partner-in-charge of the firm's office in Brussels. He teaches in the International Transactions Clinic as well as courses on transnational law and international commercial transactions, and also serves on the board of the Center for International and Comparative Law. Dickinson has chaired the ABA Committees on European Law and Foreign Claims and the ABA Section of International Law and Practice. He has served on the executive council of the American Society of International Law and is currently on the advisory board of the International Law Institute. Dickinson also is chair of the ABA's International Legal Resource Center, which provides global legal assistance in conjunction with the UN Development Programme. He received both his B.A. and J.D. from the University of Michigan. Following law school, he earned his LL.M. as a Jervey Fellow at Columbia University. He also studied at The Hague Academy of International Law in the Netherlands and L'Université d'Aix-Marseille in France, and spent a brief period as an extern in the Office of the Legal Adviser of the U.S., Department of State.

DEGREES
B.A., J.D., University of Michigan; LL.M., Columbia
Professor Jennifer Drogula is a corporate attorney with experience handling cross-border transactions in more than 25 countries. She worked in private practice for almost 20 years, most recently as a partner in the corporate department of Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale and Dorr LLP. She has advised clients in transnational business transactions including mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, venture capital and private equity investments, and debt financings. She also has advised fund managers and investors in connection with investment fund formation and operation. She also has experience in technology transactions, including the licensing and acquisition of intellectual property. Drogula's pro bono work has included representing social business enterprises, including microfinance institutions. She is on the board of directors of Grameen Foundation USA, a nonprofit that fights poverty, principally through support of microfinance and technology solutions. In addition, she taught a course on social business enterprise at Georgetown University School of Foreign Service in 2008. Drogula received her B.A. from the University of Texas at Austin and her J.D. and LL.M. from Duke University School of Law. She is a member of the bars of the District of Columbia and New York.
Professor Saul A. Green, '72, is the deputy mayor of the City of Detroit. Prior to that appointment, he was senior counsel and a member of Miller Canfield's Criminal Defense Group and Litigation and Dispute Resolution Practice Group, with a specialty in alternative dispute resolution, white-collar crime, and high-profile litigation. Green was appointed U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan by former President William J. Clinton, and served in that capacity from May 1994 to May 2001. During his many years of public service, he has held the positions of Wayne County corporation counsel; chief counsel, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Detroit Field Office; and assistant U.S. attorney. He completed service as the independent monitor overseeing implementation of police reforms in Cincinnati, Ohio. In 2009, he received the Dennis W. Archer Public Service Award, recognizing outstanding public service to the metropolitan Detroit region, from the Detroit Metropolitan Bar Association. Green received his law degree in 1972 from Michigan Law and a B.A. in pre-legal studies in 1969 from the University of Michigan.
Professor Alison Hirschel serves as the elder law attorney with the Michigan Poverty Law Program, a statewide back-up center for legal services programs, where her practice includes litigation, legislative and administrative advocacy, and professional and community education efforts. In addition, Hirschel is a commissioner of the American Bar Association Commission on Law and Aging and past president of The National Consumer Voice for Quality Long Term Care (formerly NCCNHR) in Washington, D.C. She is also co-editor and one of the authors of Advising the Older Client and Client with Disabilities (ICLE, 2009). Prior to joining the Michigan Law faculty in 1998, she worked at Community Legal Services in Philadelphia as a staff attorney, codirector of the Elderly Law Project, and finally as the director of planning. From 1991 to 1997, she taught elder law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Hirschel received her B.A. from the University of Michigan and her J.D. from Yale Law School. She clerked for the Hon. Joseph S. Lord III of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
Professor Bob Hirshon, '73, the Frank G. Millard Professor from Practice and special counsel on developments in the legal profession, is an internationally known lawyer, writer, and speaker. He practiced law for 30 years in Portland, Maine, and is presently counsel to the northeast regional law firm, Verrill Dana LLP. Hirshon served as president of the Maine State Bar Association, the Maine Bar Foundation, and the American Bar Association. As president of the American Bar Association, he was the spokesperson for the world's largest professional association and determined how and when the Association should speak on important national and international issues such as the profession's response to the September 11th tragedy and various corporate scandals. Under his leadership the ABA focused on issues surrounding law student debt and the professional ramifications of increasing billable hour requirements. During his three years as an officer of the ABA, he traveled to 17 countries, meeting with judges, members of the bar, and political and corporate leaders. He also has served as the CEO of Tonkon Torp LLP, an Oregon law firm of 75 lawyers and as the COO of Stoel Rives LLP, a 375-lawyer Western regional law firm with offices in 12 cities and eight states. Hirshon is the recipient of several honorary degrees and numerous state and national awards for his pro bono work and his efforts in the profession. He received his B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Michigan in 1970 and 1973, respectively.
Professor Martha S. Jones is an affiliated LS&A faculty member at the Law School, associate professor of history and Afro American studies, and co-director of the Law in Slavery and Freedom Project with Rebecca J. Scott (Michigan) and Jean Hébrard (EHESS). Her scholarly interests include the history of race, citizenship, slavery, and the rights of women in the United States and the Atlantic world. She holds a Ph.D. in history from Columbia University and a J.D. from the CUNY School of Law. Prior to joining the U-M faculty she was a public interest litigator for the HIV Law Project and MFY Legal Services. In 1994, she was awarded a Charles H. Revson Fellowship on the Future of the City of New York at Columbia University. Jones is a visiting fellow at the Center for the Critical Analysis of Social Difference at Columbia, where she co-directs the research project “Toward an Intellectual History of Black Women.” She is a member of the board of directors of the American Society for Legal History and a distinguished lecturer for the Organization of American Historians. In 2008, she was appointed a visiting scholar at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and the National Constitution Center. In 2009, she was co-curator of an exhibition, “Reframing the Color Line: Race and the Visual Culture of the Atlantic World,” at the William L. Clements Library. The author of All Bound Up Together: The Woman Question in African American Public Culture, 1830-1900 (2007), Jones’s current research includes two book projects: Overturning Dred Scott: Race, Rights, and Ritual in the Antebellum United States, and Riding the Atlantic World Circuit: Slavery and Freedom in the Era of the Haitian Revolution.
Professor Joan L. Larsen is counsel to the associate dean for student and graduate activities. She earned her J.D., magna cum laude, from Northwestern University School of Law, where she served as articles editor of the Northwestern University Law Review. She earned the John Paul Stevens Award for Academic Excellence, the Lowden-Wigmore Prize for the best student note published in the Law Review, and the Raoul Berger Prize for the best senior research paper. After graduation, she clerked for Judge David B. Sentelle of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and for Justice Antonin Scalia of the U.S. Supreme Court. Following her clerkships, she joined Sidley & Austin's Washington, D.C., office, where she was a member of the constitutional, criminal and civil litigation section. Before coming to Michigan Law in 1998, she was a visiting assistant professor at Northwestern. From January 2002 to May 2003, Larsen served as deputy assistant attorney general in the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel, where she provided advice to the White House, the attorney general, and government agencies regarding constitutional and statutory law. Larsen's research and teaching interests include constitutional law, criminal procedure, and presidential power.

DEGREES
B.A., University of Northern Iowa; J.D., Northwestern
Professor Judith E. Levy, '96, is director of the Law School's public interest/public service faculty fellows and assistant U.S. attorney in the Eastern District of Michigan, where she serves as the Civil Rights Unit chief. She previously served as a trial attorney with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Detroit before assuming a position with the U.S. Department of Justice. Levy specializes in large civil rights cases, including fair housing, fair lending, police misconduct, juvenile justice, and disability law. She has received numerous awards from the Department of Justice Civil Rights Division for her work on fair housing cases and was a 2004 recipient of a Department of Justice Director's Award for work on other civil rights investigations and cases. At the Law School, she team-teaches seminars on selected problems in policing, fair housing, and diversity. Levy received her B.S. from the University of Michigan and her J.D. from Michigan Law. Following her clerkship with U.S. District Judge Bernard A. Friedman in Detroit, she was an elected union official and chief negotiator for the service and maintenance employees at U-M for eight years.
Professor Karl E. Lutz, ’75, practiced business law in Chicago and New York for more than 20 years with Kirkland & Ellis, but now focuses on teaching and other outside interests. While at Kirkland, he specialized in private equity, venture capital, leveraged buyouts, mergers and acquisitions, debt and equity financings, and board representations. He also served on the firm’s senior management committee for a number of years, and was general counsel for a public company. At the Law School, he has taught courses in business transactions, private equity and entrepreneurial transactions, law firms and legal careers, and professional responsibility. Lutz also holds a teaching appointment from Northwestern University School of Law, and maintains an “of counsel” relationship with Kirkland & Ellis. He is a graduate of Yale College and Michigan Law.
Professor Leonard M. Niehoff, '84, joined the Michigan Law faculty as a professor from practice in 2010 after eight years as an adjunct faculty member. He practiced with the Butzel Long law firm for 26 years, chairing its appellate, media, and higher education practice groups. He handled libel, privacy, and access matters for such media clients as The Detroit News, CBS, Scripps-Howard, and "60 Minutes." He also represented higher education institutions, including the University of Michigan and Michigan State, Wayne State, and Yale universities. This included service on the team that defended U-M's use of affirmative action in its admissions policies. He also has a long history of pro bono work on behalf of individuals and organizations. Niehoff has a deep interest in legal scholarship as well. He is the author or coauthor of more than 100 publications, including a treatise on media law, a monograph on the attorney-client privilege, several book chapters, and dozens of law review and bar journal articles on wide-ranging issues. His research and writing interests span the fields of evidence, ethics, First Amendment, higher education law, U.S. Supreme Court history, and trial and appellate advocacy. Niehoff received his B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Michigan.
Mark D. Rosenbaum, the Harvey J. Gunderson Professor from Practice, is chief counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union in Los Angeles, where he has worked since 1974. His areas of expertise include race, gender, poverty and homelessness, education, voting rights, workers’ rights, immigrants’ rights, the First Amendment, and criminal trials. He has argued on three occasions before the U.S. Supreme Court, and has frequently appeared before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the California Supreme Court, and the Court of Military Appeals. Rosenbaum began teaching at Michigan Law in 1993. In February 2010, he began teaching constitutional law at the Peking University of Transnational Law in Shenzhen, China. He has taught at UCLA Law School, the University of Southern California Law Center, and Loyola Law School, and has lectured at Harvard and Duke universities. The recipient of numerous awards and commendations, he is regularly selected as one of the most influential lawyers in California, and recently was named California Attorney of the Year in the area of civil rights. Rosenbaum received his B.A. from the University of Michigan and his J.D. from Harvard Law School, where he was vice president of the Harvard Legal Aid Bureau.
DEGREES
B.A., Swarthmore College; J.D., Yale

David M. Uhlmann is the Jeffrey F. Liss Professor from Practice and director of the Environmental Law and Policy Program. His research and advocacy interests include criminal enforcement of environmental laws, worker endangerment, and efforts to address global climate change. Since joining the Michigan Law faculty in 2007, Uhlmann has published articles in the Stanford Environmental Law Journal, the Utah Law Review, the Environmental Law Forum, The New York Times, and the American Constitution Society's Issue Briefs series; he also is the author of a forthcoming article in the Michigan Law Review regarding the Gulf oil spill. Uhlmann has testified before Congress, appeared on national news programs, including CNN, Frontline, and NPR, and lectured widely about environmental crime and sustainability issues. Prior to joining the Law School faculty, Uhlmann served for 17 years with the U.S. Department of Justice, the last seven as chief of the Environmental Crimes Section, where he was the top environmental crimes prosecutor in the country. His work as lead prosecutor in United States v. Elias was chronicled in the book The Cyanide Canary. Uhlmann received a B.A. in history with high honors from Swarthmore College and a J.D. from Yale Law School. He clerked for U.S. District Court Judge Marvin H. Shoob in Atlanta.
Professor Mark Van Putten, '82, has 25 years of experience in environmental policymaking and nonprofit organizational leadership at the international, national, regional, and local levels. He is founder and president of ConservationStrategy® LLC, an environmental strategy and organizational development consulting firm based in the Washington, D.C., area. Prior to founding ConservationStrategy in 2003, Van Putten spent more than 20 years on the staff of the National Wildlife Federation (NWF), America's largest membership-based environmental group, including nearly eight years as president and CEO. Earlier, he founded and led NWF's Great Lakes regional office and Michigan Law's Environmental Law Clinic. Van Putten graduated magna cum laude from Michigan Law in 1982, and has taught courses and seminars on environmental law and policy at the Law School and the School of Natural Resources and Environment, where he currently serves as a member of the visiting committee. Van Putten recently served on President Obama's Department of Interior transition team.

On the 30th anniversary of the Clean Water Act, he was named one of 30 American "Clean Water Heroes."
Faculty Index

A
Adelman, Barry A ........................................... 90
Alvarez, Alicia .............................................. 4
Appleberry, Nicole .......................................... 91
Avi-Yonah, Reuven S ....................................... 5

B
Baer, Susanne .................................................. 75
Bagenstos, Samuel .......................................... 6
Bagley, Nicholas .............................................. 7
Barr, Michael S ................................................. 8
Becker, Ted .................................................... 81
Beny, Laura .................................................... 9
Bromberg, Howard .......................................... 82
Burand, Deborah ............................................. 92

C
Caminker, Evan H ............................................. 10
Carr, Bridgette ............................................... 93
Chinkin, Christine .......................................... 76
Chopp, Debra .................................................. 11
Clark, Sherman J ............................................. 12
Cooper, Edward H ........................................... 13
Crane, Daniel ................................................ 14
Crolley, Steven P ............................................. 15
Croskey-Roberts, Rachel ................................. 83

D
Daugirdas, Kristina ........................................... 16
Davis, Alicia J ................................................ 17
Deming, Rachel E ........................................... 94
Dickinson, Timothy L ....................................... 95
Drogula, Jennifer ............................................ 96
Duquette, Donald N ......................................... 18

E
Eisenberg, Rebecca S ....................................... 19
Ellsworth, Phoebe .......................................... 20

F
Falon, Paul H .................................................. 84
Friedman, Richard D ...................................... 21
Frier, Bruce W ............................................... 22
Frost, Philip M ............................................... 23

G
Geradin, Damien ........................................... 77
Green, Saul A ................................................ 97
Gross, Samuel R ............................................. 24

H
Hakimi, Monica ............................................. 25
Halberstam, Daniel ...................................... 26
Hathaway, James C ....................................... 27
Hershovitz, Scott .......................................... 28
Herzog, Don ................................................ 29
Hines Jr., James R .......................................... 30
Hirschel, Alison ............................................. 98
Hirshon, Bob ................................................ 99
Horwitz, Jill R ................................................ 31
Howson, Nicholas C ...................................... 32

J
Jones, Martha S ................................................ 100

K
Kahn, Douglas A ........................................... 33
Katz, Ellen D .................................................. 34
Khanna, Vikramaditya S .................................. 35
Kochen, Madeline .......................................... 36
Krier, James E ............................................... 37

L
Larsen, Joan L ................................................ 101
Levy, Judith E .............................................. 102
Litman, Jessica ............................................. 38
Logue, Kyle D ............................................... 39
Lutz, Karl E ................................................... 103

M
MacKinnon, Catharine A .................................... 40
McCormack, Bridget M .................................... 41
McCruden, J. Christopher ................................ 78
Mendelson, Nina A ......................................... 42
Miller, William I ........................................... 43
Moran, David ............................................... 44
Mortenson, Julian Davis .................................. 45

N
Niehoff, Leonard M ......................................... 104
Novak, Bill .................................................... 46

O
Osbeck, Mark K ............................................. 85

P
Parson, Edward A ......................................... 47
Payton, Sallyanne .......................................... 48
Pinto, Timothy ............................................. 86
Pottow, John A.E .......................................... 49
Prescott, J.J ................................................... 50
Primus, Eve Brensike ..................................... 51
Primus, Richard ............................................ 52
Pritchard, Adam C ......................................... 53

R
Radin, Margaret Jane ....................................... 54
Ratner, Steven R ............................................ 55
Regan, Donald H ........................................... 56
Reingold, Paul D ............................................ 57
Rine, Nicholas J ............................................. 58
Rosenbaum, Mark D ....................................... 105

S
Sankaran, Vivek S ........................................... 59
Santacroce, David A ........................................ 60
Schlanger, Margo .......................................... 61
Schneider, Carl E .......................................... 62
Schroth, Anne ............................................... 63
Scott, Rebecca .............................................. 64
Seinfeld, Gil .................................................. 65
Seymour, Thomas H ....................................... 87
Simma, Bruno ............................................... 79
Starr, Sonja B ................................................ 66

T
Thomas, Kimberly ........................................... 67
Thompson, Dana A ........................................ 88

U
Uhlmann, David M .......................................... 106

V
Vandervort, Frank .......................................... 69
Van Putten, Mark .......................................... 107

W
Waggoner, Lawrence W ................................... 70
West, Mark D ............................................... 71
White, James J ............................................... 72
Whitman, Christina B ..................................... 73
Wilensky, Beth H ........................................... 88
The University of Michigan, as an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer, complies with all applicable federal and state laws regarding nondiscrimination and affirmative action. The University of Michigan is committed to a policy of equal opportunity for all persons and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, disability, religion, height, weight, or veteran status in employment, educational programs and activities, and admissions. Inquiries or complaints may be addressed to the Senior Director for Institutional Equity, and Title IX/Section 504/ADA Coordinator, Office of Institutional Equity, 2072 Administrative Services Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-1432, 734-763-0235, TTY 734-647-1388. For other University of Michigan information call 734-764-1817.

Regents of the University
Julia Donovan Darlow, Ann Arbor
Laurence B. Deitch, Bingham Farms
Denise Ilitch, Bingham Farms
Olivia P. Maynard, Goodrich
Andrea Fischer Newman, Ann Arbor
Andrew C. Richner, Grosse Pointe Park
S. Martin Taylor, Grosse Pointe Farms
Katherine E. White, Ann Arbor
Mary Sue Coleman, ex officio

© 2010 Regents of the University of Michigan

Design by Michigan Law Communications
Photos by Philip Dattilo, Tish Holbrook,
Leisa Thompson, University Photo Services
(Lin Jones, Scott Soderberg)