Class of 1894

Bulletin, vol. 1, no. 1
OUR BOW TO THE CLASS OF '94

With this issue THE BULLETIN makes its first appearance, pursuant to a resolution adopted at the quarter century reunion that a class leaflet be issued from time to time. The object of the innovation must be apparent. With our meetings so far apart and members of the class scattered over so wide an area, nothing, we believe, will tend to keep classmates in touch with one another so well as this vehicle of information.

The form and size of THE BULLETIN must, of course, always remain modest, with its limited sphere and audience. There is no pretension to the dignity of a newspaper. The leaflet is intended merely to serve as a messenger, a purveyor of news about classmates, with a message now and then in the interest of our class organization and reunions. We may not always be able to issue THE BULLETIN in printed form; one of our classmates is in the printing business, and, prompted by class spirit, has kindly agreed to print the several issues of 1920 at actual cost.

In order to make THE BULLETIN interesting to all, each classmate must take it upon himself to supply the Editor not only with news about himself but also with items about other members of the class. Forget your modesty! The success of our leaflet will depend entirely upon how you observe that mandate. Mail us some news right now! Other communications and suggestions are invited.

The class Treasurer is sending out with this number statements of "dues" for 1920, also in conformity with a resolution adopted at the quarter century reunion. The sum of $5 was fixed for this year by the class, mainly because of the proposed edition of a new up-to-date class directory and the condition of a depleted treasury. The resolution was fathered at the time of its adoption particularly by those who had never assisted in defraying the expenses of maintaining our class organization, and it was the unanimous opinion that some plan should be adopted whereunder each member would have the opportunity to contribute his mite. Please be prompt with your remittance.

A few classmates, probably through oversight, have failed to return the post-cards sent to each member, to be filled in with requested data, for the new directory. Kindly give this your immediate attention.

REUNION ECHOES

The officers on behalf of the class take this opportunity of conveying to the members of the reunion committee, and those who assisted at the reunion, their appreciation of the fine work of cooperation performed by them in making the reunion a success. Without that help, the result could not have been possible.

Of the regulation reunion yellow and blue class badges issued by the University, the supply for Law '94 was exhausted on the first day of the reunion. The Alumni Secretary's estimate of attendance was based upon the usual one for returning law classes.

Many of our classmates came to the reunion in their motor cars, instead of by rail. Among them were H. E. NAEDELY, from Saginaw, Michigan, with his wife and three children, J. W. ZUBER, from Columbus, Ohio, with his wife and two children, U. G. DENMAN, from Toledo, Ohio, with his wife and daughter, F. J. COCHRAN, from Northville, Michigan, with his wife, L. A. STONE-MAN, from Detroit, Michigan, with his wife and daughter and J. L. HITCHCOCK, from Pontiac, Michigan.

Ann Arbor never looked more beautiful. BRYCE, author of The American Commonwealth, was right when he said that Ann Arbor comes nearer the typical English university town...
Our class colors, cherry and white, worn as hat bands and badges formed a happy contrast to the yellow and blue so popular during the reunion season. You could tell a '94 Law a block off.

'94 Laws, whether in the parade or as pedestrians seeing the city, met with a hearty reception from the townspeople. The writer was hailed more than once with "Hello, '94 Law!"

J. N. Dunham, although in the law school for a brief period, came all the way from Hoisington, Kansas. As a result of his reunion visit he vows he will attend every other reunion staged—a worthy example to follow by others of similar class tenure.

T. W. Day, Fred Smith and Judge Tuttle, the local committee, did fine work in getting out the attendance of classmates to the reunion.

C. J. Cole, of Kent’s Mill, Maine, who attended the reunion with his wife, extended his visit beyond Ann Arbor; he traveled as far as Los Angeles, California.

M. J. Dillon, of Galena, Illinois, writes: "I am still thinking of the fine time we had at Ann Arbor."

R. Hartzell, of Denver, Colorado, writes: "I went to that reunion rather reluctantly. The result is that I feel more than repaid for my trouble and expense that the journey involved and I have felt ever since that I would not have missed it for anything. Let us keep in touch with one another.

L. R. Herrick, of Farmer City, Illinois, writes: "I have never for an instant regretted it. The reunion will always be a green spot in my memory."

C. H. Kubat, of Omaha, Nebraska, writes: "There is not a member who was not glad of being able to be back for a few days in the old college town. I should never have forgiven myself if I had not gone there."

To Judge Burr we give sincere thanks for his interesting and inspiring reviews of the reunion.

NEWS ABOUT CLASSMATES

We have received a clipping from a Fort Worth, Texas, newspaper to the effect that W. H. L. McCourtie, member of the firm of Scanlon & McCourtie, has struck a big producer of oil in the Ranger territory in the Olden district of Texas, and that it is the largest well ever uncovered in the said territory; it is said to have an aggregate production of about 7,500 barrels.

G. W. Fuller has been appointed Referee in Bankruptcy for the Northern District of New York.

J. H. Hassinger has just been elected State Senator for the First Senatorial District of Virginia, which is not bad for a Republican in Virginia.

F. C. Kuhn resigned his judgeship, to reenter upon the practice of law.

L. A. Stoneman has acquired an attractive home in Ann Arbor, and is commuting daily to and from his office in Detroit.

J. T. Wagner is Managing Editor of the Inter-Borough Press, of Spring City, Pennsylvania, and is in the printing business.

W. W. Woodbury was recently elected Judge of the Probate Court of his County.

A. G. Mills, our former President, has been presented with a handomely engrossed copy of resolutions adopted at the class reunion, expressing appreciation of his services as President.

The Secretary has been in communication with President Hutchins, of the University, as well as with Dean Bates, of the law school, who have promised to supply a printed key to the names in the class picture to be affixed to the frame, and also to replace the broken glass in the frame of the picture.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted at the class meeting in June, letters of condolence were sent to the families of former Professors Thompson and Knowlton.

I. A. Clark is manager of the Clark Company, at Clay Center, Ottawa County, Ohio; he writes that his specialties are "Yeast Foam, Postage Stamps and Post Toasties."
