OUR MAN IN HUTCINS: Last Wednesday at the Senior Class Party several of those attending were honored by their classmates as follows: Most Actionable Nuisance, Wally Winget; Sammy Baugh Award, Cecil Mellin; Hitchcock Award, John Peschel and "Duke" Slichter; Most likely to be disbarred, Stan Zax; Rip Van Winkle Award, Walter Andrews.

SENIORS: The class party Wednesday night ended up in the black and the excess of approximately $45 will be placed in a fund with the University Alumni Office to pay the cost of the class newsletter. However, unless there is a better response to the original request for help on this project, there may not be a newsletter. To date one person has volunteered and there is a need for many more. The details of this project are on the main bulletin board. The response to the class gift (the scholarship fund) was much better as 67 class members each contributed $1. A box will be placed in the recorders office on Monday for those who have not contributed as yet and so desire. Please put your name with your gift so we can have a record of those contributing to the fund.

INTERNATIONAL LEGAL STUDIES: Thanks to a $500,000 grant in 1954, from The Ford Foundation The University of Michigan Law School has greatly expanded its international legal studies program since 1955. A recent report by the School to the Foundation notes these achievements: 1. In addition to their major teaching responsibilities in domestic American Law, nearly one-third the U-M law faculty has conducted research and teaching in some phase of international or foreign law. 2. At present, 15 courses and seminars are offered in international legal studies. 3. During the past year alone, 16 experts in this field have visited the U-M. 4. Five visiting scholars from law faculties in Turkey, England, and Japan resided at the U-M during 1959-60, as did 31 graduate students from 16 foreign countries. 5. In all, a total of nine books and 28 articles relevant to international legal studies in connection with the Michigan program were published during 1959-60.

"The Law School must continue to adjust its teaching and research program to meet new problems facing the American lawyer in a world of expanding international commerce, rapid scientific achievement, and deep international tensions taxing world institutions," note Profs. William W. Bishop Jr. and Eric Stein, co-directors of the international legal studies program.
